SECURITIES LOST FROM MAILS

A general alarm was sent out today by postoffice inspectors and the postoffice authorities all over the State to be on the lookout for the envelope full of securities, checks and bonds which was stolen from the First National Bank of Clinton Tuesday while en route to the First National Bank of Boston.

The envelope containing between $45,000 and $50,000 in securities, said to be not negotiable, according to the officials of the bank, were placed on the 5 o'clock train for Boston, consigned to the First National Bank of Boston, the correspondent of the Clinton Bank, to be sent through the clearing house.

LOST FROM MAIL.

The envelope was put into the regular mail, as a piece of ordinary mail matter and was unregistered, and left Clinton on the 5 o'clock train. The envelope failed to arrive at the bank in Boston, and last week the bank authorities got into communication with the postoffice inspectors' department, with the result that the inspectors were assigned to the case.

The placing of this package on the train to Boston is a regular occurrence, an envelope of securities and checks being sent on the same train every day to the clearing house in Boston.

OTHER VALUABLES GONE.

The First National Bank of Leominster also sends its securities to Boston on the same train, and it is said that on the same day as the Clinton envelope was stolen from the train a similar envelope of the Leominster Bank was stolen also.

Outside of admitting that such an envelope has been lost, the officials of the bank refuse to discuss the case, and the postoffice authorities will have nothing to say on the matter.

It is supposed, however, that the piece of mail, enclosed in the regular mail sack, was put in the railway mail car that runs from Fitchburg to South Framingham at the Clinton station Tuesday night, and that somewhere between Clinton and Boston it was removed.

Several of the large business houses and many of the bankers in Boston have received circulars from the Postoffice Department, it was learned today, warning them to be on the lookout for bank notes that were stolen by train robbers from a train near Central Station, West Virginia, October 3.

The bank notes were made out on a national bank of West Virginia, and were unsigned. The amount said by the circular to have been stolen in the robbery was $160,650. Another lot of $2,000 worth of unsigned bank notes were stolen from Fayetteville, North Carolina, on October 12 in a like manner, and the Postoffice Department has sent warning on these also.

Paroled After Convicts Raise Purse of $30

A prisoner in the State prison at Charlestown was freed today after refusing to accept a parole because he had no money. The other convicts took up a collection for him and he was liberated.

The Parole Board notified him Thursday that he was eligible for parole. He replied that, as he had no friends in this part of the country, nothing to do, nowhere to go, he would prefer to serve out his sentence.

Father Murphy, the prison chaplain, learned that the man's home was in the Middle West and that if he had money to go there he would like to be freed. The word went around and $30 collection was taken.

Uphold Assessment on Realty Business

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Interpreting the corporation tax section of the income tax law, the Supreme Court today ruled that corporations engaged in the realty business should not be permitted to deduct the interest paid out on bonds in determining their net incomes. The government's assessment of a $1,781 tax on the No. 42 Broadway corporation, New York city, was upheld.

He then will go to the Pacific coast, taking in the San Francisco Exposition.

Two women in the party were injured.

BAY STATE FARE PLEA OPENED

When hearings opened today before the Public Service Commission on the Bay State Railway's "extra penny" plea there were gathered in Kingsley Hall in the Ford Building about 250 representatives of cities and towns on the system, preparing to fight the fare increase, and the first business done was to call a roll of the cities and towns on the system, so that representatives of each city and town might give notice of their intention to protest.

When Boston was called, no one answered. No one was on hand to represent the city at the hearing. Boston was one of the few cities and towns involved which failed to have representatives present.

James F. Jackson, representative of the road, opened the hearings by presenting a statement of the road's claims, when the rollcall was done.

He said the road needs additional revenue to the extent of $1,615,165. One of the items for which this additional revenue is needed is for returns on investments represented by the road. These returns on investments—dividends and the like—were calculated on a 7 per cent. basis.

Sheldon E. Wardwell is Mr. Jackson's assistant at the hearings.

BOSTON UNREPRESENTED.

When the roll of cities was called a number of mayors responded. Among them were the following:

Mayor Charles H. Adams of Melrose,
Mayor William H. Blakeley of Malden,
Mayor Herman McDonald of Beverly,
Mayor Charles H. Barrett of Gloucester,
Mayor Albert L. Bartlett of Haverhill.

Two Ships Disabled by Turk Shore Guns

By International News Service.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 8. — The War Office wired today that Turkish shore batteries struck an allied torpedo boat and transport near Anafarta, Sunday, and both vessels were emiting dense clouds of smoke as they withdrew, indicating that they were on fire. A hostile aeroplane was also brought down by the Turkish gunners. It fell into the sea, but was towed away.

The AMERICAN does not, however, feel at liberty to deprive its readers of the statements of the proponents of the loan, whether in news text or in advertising. German Cruiser Sunk by British on Swedish Coast

By International News Service.

BERLIN, Nov. 8.—The German cruiser Undine, while patrolling the waters off the southern coast of Sweden, was torpedoed and sunk by a British submarine on Sunday afternoon, it was officially announced today by the Admiralty.

The members of the crew were saved.

The Undine was a small ship, her displacement being 2,670 tons. She carried a crew of 275 men.

The lost cruiser was built in 1901. She carried ten four-inch guns, two machine guns and two torpedo tubes.

Boy Is Burned to Death Playing with Matches

Three-year-old Barnet Cohen was fatally burned today while playing with matches in the rear of his home, No. 65 Bloomingdale street, Chelsea. He died at the Frost Hospital. The little boy's cries brought his mother, Mrs. Joseph Cohen, and Mrs. Rose Dudneffsky, who attempted to tear the burning clothes from his body. Another neighbor put the fire out by rolling the boy in a rug.

Somebody telephoned the fire department and Chief David M. Hudson and a hose company responded. Chief Hudson hurried the boy, horribly burned, to the Frost Hospital in an automobile.

'WILL NOT YIELD SEA POWER'

By STUART MARTIN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Several weeks are expected to elapse before England replies to the American note protesting against the blockade and the seizure of American cargoes on neutral ships. The note is now being thoroughly studied by officials of the Foreign Office, and when a reply is given it will be of the most exhaustive character.

While England is anxious to maintain the present cordial relations with the United States and to meet the demands of the United States government, the present attitude is that she cannot afford to weaken her position by making sacrifices which might help Germany in any way.

The American note is sharply criticized by the British newspapers, which take issue with the United States on nearly all the principles involved.

The Post declares that the British people have not the slightest intention of permitting a surrender of their maritime rights.

WILL MAINTAIN RIGHTS.

"The United States government is perfectly cognizant of the fact that no naval power can or will relinquish its rights to control the sea in war time," says the Post. "Whatever the British government may do or say, it is quite certain that the British people have not the smallest intention of permitting a surrender of their maritime rights. No nation can be expected to commit suicide."

The note advances opinions which are notoriously open to dispute, according to the Times, which says:

"American jurists and diplomats will feel, we imagine, that the latest American note is not altogether worthy of the better traditions of the American republic. It goes at great length into technical points and advances upon them opinions which are notoriously open to dispute.

"Now here rises a broad view of the larger issues involved in the world war. The document wholly ignores not only the world-wide character of the present war, but also its importance to civilization, humanity and the fundamental moral issues which the best American opinion acknowledges to be at stake.

"The note overlooks the fact that British submarines are in the Baltic when it affirms that the German coasts are notoriously open for trade with the Scandinavian countries. Our position in the Baltic is stronger than the positions of the United States when, without protest from us, she placed the coasts of the Confederacy under a paper blockade. We might be well advised to make use of our naval strength in the Baltic and cut the knot of these controversies by proclaiming a blockade for all the German coast and ports.

"EXTRAVAGANT LANGUAGE."

"The second point in the note which we cannot pass over is the extravagant character of the language. We make allowance, however, for the exigencies of American do[illegible]

MRS. FOLSOM, WHO KILLED HUSBAND, ESCAPES ASYLUM

Mrs. Mary Hardy Folsom, who shot her husband, a Boston lawyer, on June 20, [illegible], on the road near Exeter, N. H., and was sent to the Hospital for the Insane at Concord, N. H.

Mrs. Mary Hardy Folsom of Somerville escaped last night from the State Hospital for the Insane at Concord, N. H., where she was committed a year ago for life for the murder of her husband, Henry H. Folsom, a Boston lawyer, chairman of the Somerville School Committee and a former Dartmouth athlete. She is still at large.

Mrs. Folsom was returning from chapel service when she escaped at 5:45 last evening. She was dressed for the street, wearing a coat, hat and veil. Her room is on the second landing of the Walker Building. The chapel, in the main building of the asylum group, is 300 yards distant across the campus.

Mrs. Folsom was attended by a nurse at the service. The young woman grappled with her patient when she made a dash for the gate, but Mrs. Folsom easily threw her off. It was dusk and Mrs. Folsom vanished before the nurse could give the alarm.

The Hospital is off Pleasant street in the fashionable West End of Concord. In the rear is open country and woods. Mrs. Folsom is thought to have headed in that direction.

The officials fear she may have saved money and that she has escaped by trolley or train. Others fear that she may have killed herself.

She was visited regularly by her aged father, Captain Washington Hardy of Dover and other relatives. Dwight Hall of Dover, counsel for the Hardy family today offered a reward of $100 for Mrs. Folsom's capture or information as to her whereabouts.

PEABODY SCHOOL SCARE

Three hundred of the children who went through the fire that cost twenty-one lives at St. John's parochial school, ten days ago, were involved in a panic in the old High School building at Peabody today, and raced down the stairs or in some cases jumped from the windows in their rush to get into the open air.

The panic was started by a boy's cry of fire when steam began to escape from a radiator. One boy was badly cut when he jumped through a window. Other boys raised the window sashes before climbing through.

The old High School building at Peabody has been turned over to the St. John's School authorities by the town. The building has been refitted, and today about 300 children gathered to be assigned to rooms and seated.

RAISED CRY OF "FIRE."

They were barely in place, half on the first floor and half on the second, when one boy undertook to open an air valve on a steam radiator.

When he had done so, the steam began to escape. There was seven pounds pressure in the boiler. The cloud of steam frightened the children, and when one boy cried "fire" the panic started.

The children rushed for the two exits, and from the second floor, alarmed by the cries, poured down more than a hundred pupils who had been assigned to rooms there.

In the class rooms, on the first floor, the children finding their doors blocked by the jam of little bodies, turned to the windows.

One boy, without stopping to open the window, jumped through the glass and was badly cut.

Others threw up the sashes and climbed out. It is only a few feet from these windows to the ground, so that no one was hurt except the boy who jumped through the glass.

Some of the children ran all the way to their homes in their fright and cried that the school was burning up.

2,000 XMAS BASKETS GIVEN

Here's the first man to accept the AMERICAN'S invitation and join the Campaign of Happiness.

It's not a political campaign, but a Campaign for Christmas Happiness, and it's strictly a campaign for others.

Less than an hour after the AMERICAN announced the opening of the campaign, this first comer was heard from.

His name: Oscar A. Shepard, and he is a member of the Shepard, Clark Company, of No. 85 Commercial street.

His contribution: Two thousand wooden baskets, to be used in distributing the concentrated happiness, fruits of the campaign on Christmas Eve.

His letter, telling why he was the first to be heard from, reads as follows:

> Boston, November 6, 1915.
> Editor Boston AMERICAN:
> I note by today's AMERICAN that you intend to repeat the best exhibition of practical charity I have ever known—"Give a Basket."
> It gives me great pleasure to contribute 2,000 empty baskets to be used in this good work.
> OSCAR A. SHEPARD,
> Pres.-Treas. Shepard, Clark Co.

The AMERICAN'S Campaign of Happiness this year is inspired by the splendid success of the "Give-a-Basket" plan of last year.

The AMERICAN'S part is to receive your contributions, baskets, money, food supplies and the like, and see that the money is well expended, and goes to the proper people. Every needy family will be given a good Christmas dinner by the working of this plan.

The AMERICAN is simply a sort of a general manager of this Campaign of Happiness. You—every one of you—will have to help out with the details.

Last year 7,000 baskets of Christmas dinner were distributed.

This year—how many is it going to be?

Mr. Shepard has the honor of leading the way.

Cardinal Gibbons Hits Royal 'Hot Air'

BALTIMORE, Nov. 8.—Cardinal Gibbons departed from his usual style at Sunday morning services to describe as "hot air" the highly formal speeches insisted upon in royal courts as compared with the free and open expression of spontaneous prayer when addressing God alone.

Many of his phrases, especially those in describing the difficulty of approaching royalty compared with the easy access to God, were evidently spontaneous. In drawing this contrast he seemed to enjoy getting close to the people by using a phrase which they might grasp and easily remember.

BRITISH 'BIG THREE' TO RUN THE WAR

By PERCY THOMAS.
Staff Correspondent of the International News Service.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Premier Asquith, First Lord of the Admiralty Balfour and Minister of Munitions Lloyd George are the "Big Three" who will hereafter direct the military and naval policies of Great Britain. Announcement was made today by the Evening News that the Cabinet had elected these three men as the "War Council."

Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Secretary, will attend the sessions of the war council, when questions relating to the policy of the Foreign Office are under consideration.

The announcement made by the Evening News was regarded as authoritative, as it came just before the House of Lords reconvened for a resumption of debate on matters relating to the war. Most of the members of this body had opposed the system under which the entire Cabinet direct military affairs.

Mayor M. J. O'Keefe of Salem and Mayor Chester I. Campbell of Quincy.

A number of city solicitors and town counsel also responded. They included:

City Solicitor Arthur S. Wadleigh of Lynn, City Solicitor William D. Chapple of Salem, City Solicitor Elder of Medford, City Solicitor Knan of Somerville, Town Counsel H. G. Worthen of Weymouth and City Solicitor Daniel C. Murphy of Lawrence.

Others present included Ralph S. Bauer, president of the Lynn Chamber of Commerce; William H. Day, its secretary; George M. Nichols and Edwin F. Dwelley of Lynn, George E. Rix, traffic manager of the Lawrence Chamber of Commerce; Daniel M. Casey of the Haverhill Board of Trade, Robert E. Brown, chief selectman of West Newbury, John F. Bowen of West Newbury, general agent of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, and George Grime of the Fall River Board of Trade.

HICHBORN WILL BE HEARD.

The calling of the roll of towns and cities was attended by interesting incidents. When Revere was called, Henry G. Hichborn arose.

"Here," he cried, "I want to wake them up. I appear as a citizen."

Chairman Macleod said that at present they were merely calling the roll. Hichborn responded:

"This isn't a railroad meeting, is it? It's a public meeting, isn't it. I want to be heard."

Macleod—There will be ample opportunity. The hearings will be in progress for a long time. You can be heard later.

Hitchborn—How do you know how much time I have?

The roll call went on till the town of Winchester was reached. Whitfield Tuck arose, gave his name, and said he appeared for the Grange, Patrons of Husbandry.

A moment later, the roll call was finished, and Mr. Jackson began his opening address. Mr. Hichborn of Revere at once rose to his feet, and started to speak.

MacLeod—Unless the gentleman is quiet, I shall have to clear the hall.

Whitefield Tuck claimed the floor.

Tuck—May I ask if this important hearing is to be held by the full board of the Public Service Commission?

Macleod—I regret that one member is unfortunately absent. He will soon be here.

Tuck—It is unfortunate that Mr. Russell is not here. He is drawing $8,000 a year from the State, and it is his duty to be here today and every day during the hearings.

Macleod—Mr. Russell has not yet qualified, and he is not drawing any salary just now.

JACKSON'S OPENING.

Mr. Tuck subsided, and Mr. Jackson took up his argument. After reciting the items for which the road desires revenue, he said in part:

"Clear-headed men behind this enterprise believed when the road was being organized that through possible economies and a greater financial strength, the outcome was bound to be larger and better service, with fair return upon investment. Events have proved that they were too optimistic about some things, mistaken about others and fated to meet obstacles that the wisest would never have foreseen."

Traffic did increase, he said, but not at the rate predicted. There proved to be a pressing need of repairs and reconstruction.

Advance in wages and cost of supplies, seasons of business depression, competition with other kinds of transportation and the multiplicity of demands from town and State authorities, were other factors not anticipated.

Then, too, he declared, the Bay State in the past fifteen years has been compelled to contribute millions of dollars to the cost of constructing, maintaining and improving highways and bridges, to the cost of developing parks and boulevards, burial of wires and other public improvements.

EXPENSE MUCH GREATER.

Taxes increased from $341,569 in 1901 to $658,380 in 1915. In 1901 total operating expenses were 61.38 per cent. of operating revenue, but this rose to 73.04 per cent. of operating revenue in 1915.

He gave the total outstanding securities of the Bay State and leased companies in Massachusetts as $47,534,500 and declared that every share of stock and every bond was lawfully issued and is lawfully outstanding.

As the only sure method of determining the true basis for change in fares, Mr. Jackson announced, a thorough and unprejudiced inventory of the railway property was lately made by an expert engineer formerly employed by the Illinois Railroad Commission. This expert's inventory places the investment of the company in physical property in Massachusetts at $43,635,365, while the reproduction cost new of the property is given as $46,361,266.

DIVIDENDS AND CREDIT.

Mr. Jackson spoke of the necessity in order to maintain the company's credit of a reasonable return upon capital. On this point he said:

"Dividends upon railway shares are to all intents and purposes an item in the cost of conducting the service. The extension of lines, the doubling of tracks, additions and improvements in rolling stock, outlay in every direction to meet the public demands are continuously calling for new capital and the company must pay the price.

"The imperative feature of the situation then is not a call from present stockholders for larger dividends, but the necessity of continuing dividends in order to get the new money required in continuing the service.

"In other States companies are generally given a free hand to obtain capital upon stocks or bonds, but under our statutes capital cannot be obtained upon bonds until an equal amount has first been obtained upon shares of stock issued at par. Unless then the risk of the business is so reduced that money is ready to take it, in other words, unless reasonable dividends are practically assured, the financing of a railway comes to a dead halt, extensions and improvements stop.

PLEA FOR CO-OPERATION.

"The company for legitimate purposes is seeking more revenue than it obtains by the fares in force. Those who have invested in its capital stock with the understanding that they were entitled to earn a full dividend have been content to take less in the expectation that by so doing they could continue the work of upbuilding this railway until more prosperous days.

FRENCH CLAIM VICTORY IN SERBIA

By International News Service.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—French troops have captured Kosjak and the Babuna Heights in Southern Serbia, it was announced today by the Serbian Legation at Athens. The Bulgarian troops which were defeated there are in retreat. Kosjak and the Babuna Heights are in the region of Isvor, about ten miles west of the Nish-Salonica railway and south of Veles.

Reporting under date of November 6, Austro-Hungarian headquarters announced that the Montenegrian troops have been defeated at their main positions and that many Serbian soldiers are deserting. The Vienna official report follows:

"Austro-Hungarian troops on the Montenegro frontier took Alinobrodo, east of Trebinje, by storm on November 4, and thus broke through to Klobuk-Ruis.

"In the Serbian war theatre numerous Serbians, deserters in civilian clothes, have been arrested."

GREECE STILL NEUTRAL.

Premier Skouloudis and the new Greek Cabinet held their first extended session today at Athens. It was devoted to a discussion of the military measures proposed by Minister of War Yanakitsas, which are said to have been fully approved. These measures caused the downfall of Premier Zaimis, but they will again be introduced in the Greek Parliament.

The otucome of the cabinet crisis shows that King Constantine is still in control and former Premier Venizelos gained practically nothing by driving out Zaimis. The next Premier has already made it clear that the government has no intention at present of departing from its attitude of neutrality.

Venezilos is reported to be deeply disappointed over the fact that no great popular demonstration in favor of the allies followed his victory in Parliament, and is said to be planning to leave Athens. In some quarters it is rumored that Venezilos was retired from politics because of his failure to swing Greece to the side of the allies.

SERBIAN ARMY ESCAPES.

While the Austro-German campaign in Northern Serbia has ben a complete success, the main Serbian army has apparently escaped the trap set it for the German, Austro-Hungarian and Bulgarian troops and has been able to make its way into the mountains south of Nish.

French and British officers who are directing the operations of the Serbs in the north, adopting the tactics of the Russians, abandoned their fortified towns and retired, contesting the advance of the Teutonic invaders with rear guard actions.

With Nish in the hands of the Bulgarians, and the railway line of communication between Berlin and Constantinople open, the main Austro-Hungarian, German and Bulgarian armies are now moving hand-in-hand upon the mountain fastnesses of the Serbs between Novi Bazar and Leskovatz.

Military authorities agree that the decisive battle in the Balkans is yet to be fought.

CONFERENCE TO AVERT STRIKE PLANNED

The committee which was granted full power by the action of the Central Labor Union yesterday at its meeting to issue a call for a general strike of all the unions allied with the striking freight handlers in Boston is expected to meet either tomorrow or Wednesday night.

Conferences will be resumed between the members of the committee representing the striking freight handlers and officials of the railroads in an effort to reach some agreement by which the men will be allowed to resume their work.

These conferences failing, the meeting scheduled for tomorrow or Wednesday night which will be attended by one delegate from every union allied with the strikers will be held, and it is expected that a vote for a general strike will be passed. The call for this committee is to be sent out today following the result of the conferences between the officials of the railroad and the committee of strikers.

BOY REFUSES TO LEAVE BURNING HOME

"Rats and matches" is given as the cause of a fire which did damage to the extent of $1,000 to the two-family frame dwelling at Nos. 252 and 254 Adams street, Dorchester, shortly after 10 a. m. today.

The house is occupied by E. Jarvis Baker and Jeremiah Mayo and family. The fire was discovered in the attic. When the fireman arrived Joseph Mayo, aged four, was in the house and fought against the attempts of the men to carry him out of the building. He said between tears:

"Mama told me not to go out of the house until she got home from market." Mrs. Mayo appeared shortly afterward on the scene.

WILSON QUOTES BIBLE ON WAR DEFENCE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—President Wilson has quoted the Bible in defence of his stand on the question of military preparedness. In a letter to Seth Low of New York, which was given out at the White House today, the President gave a quotation from Ezekiel which, it was pointed out here, might be construed as answering the attacks of Former Secretary of State Bryan. The President's letter follows:

My dear Mr. Low:

I thank you very warmly for your generous letter of November 5 and for your courtesy in letting me have a copy of your remarks on the merchant marine question.

I am particularly gratified that you should so fully concur in the position I took in my speech to the Manhattan club. There is a quotation from Ezekiel which I have had very much in my mind recently in connection with these important matters. It is the second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth verses of Chapter 33:

"Son of Man, speak to the children of thy people and say unto them when I bring the sword upon the land, if the people of the land take a man off their coasts, and set him for their watchman:

"If, when he seeth the sword come upon the land he blow the trumpet, and warn the people.

"Then whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning; if the sword come and take him away, his blood shall be upon his head:

"He heard the sound of the trumpet and took not warning, his blood shall be upon him; but he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul:

"But if the watchman sees the sword come and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come, and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity; and his blood will I require at the watchman's hand."

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

Wilson Fails to Win Kitchen to Naval Policy

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—After an interview with President Wilson lasting more than an hour Representative Claude Kitchin of North Carolina, next majority leader in the House, this afternoon declared that he could not support the President's naval program. It has been generally believed that President Wilson would swing Kitchin into line by a personal appeal to him.

Kitchin's refusal to change his mind is admitted by the President's followers to be a crushing blow against the administration's program.

"I had a very agreeable interview with the President," Representative Kitchin said, as he left the White House. "I am mighty sorry that I cannot support his naval program. I will explain my position in a speech on the floor of the House."

Mrs. Galt Now Has Trousseau All Purchased

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Mrs. Norman Galt, President Wilson's fiancee, has completed the work of ordering her trousseau, it was learned today from friends in her confidence. On her recent trip to New York she made the final necessary purchases, they said.

Considerable speculation is indulged in as to what church the President and Mrs. Galt will attend after they are married. Mrs. Galt is at present a member of St. Margaret's Episcopal Church. She attended services yesterday for the first time since her engagement to the President was announced. The President went to the Central Presbyterian Church, accompanied by his niece, Miss Helen Woodrow Bones.

LEE FOR STATE CONTROL OF SCHOOLS

Joseph Lee of the Boston School Committee, in an open letter today, advocates State control of the construction of school buildings. He criticizes the Boston Schoolhouse Commission for its opposition to a bill which would have brought about this control. He says in part.

"I think that the plans of school buildings ought to be to some extent attended by the State government.

"Two years ago the Massachusetts Civic League put in a bill providing that any city or town before starting on a new school building should submit the preliminary plans to the State Board of Education and receive its advice in the matter. The bill was defeated through the opposition of the Boston Schoolhouse Commission, upon the ground that the commission could not learn anything about the construction of school buildings.

"It may be that the Boston authorities know all that there is to know, or that will ever be found out, upon this subject; but this is not true elsewhere, and it would be a great gain if every city and town had the advantage of the experience of every other city and town before it went to work on its school buildings.

"The United States Bureau of Education has issued a valuable volume on this subject and the Sage fund has another. These two would make a start in the information which our Board of Education could collect if empowered so to do.

"I believe the Civic League will put in another such bill this year, perhaps merely providing that the Board of Education shall have funds to employ an expert and collect the information, leaving it open to cities and towns to ask advice if they want it. Such a measure might sound futile, but it would not in fact be so.

"Cities and towns are not obliged to follow the advice of the State Board of Charity, and yet they do so in most instances; and asking it is not a very long step further.

I think that if the information were there, and the fact were advertised, it would be used.

Assault Case Against Pastor Is Dismissed

The case of the Rev. T. Arthur Whitaker, the Watertown preacher, who was brought into court by his wife on the charge of assault, came up before Judge Luce today in the Waltham Court.

As the alleged assault had occurred in Everett, the judge dismissed the case, but in view of the fact that the pastor had previously been in the Waltham Court on a non-support charge, Judge Luce decided to hear some of the testimony. Mrs. Whitaker took the stand and testified.

"I went to my husband's house at No. 48 Maiden street, Everett, to get some of the $140 he owes me on back instalments in the non-support case, and while there he assaulted me. I have received but $1 from him for my support during the past month."

The Rev. Mr. Whitaker said:

"Mrs. Whitaker came to my home in Everett and created a disturbance at the door, trying to get in. She finally gained entrance and slapped my face."

He said his wife had written poisoned pen letters to many of his associates and friends.

In Chelsea Court for Auto Collision

E. Gordon Cameron of Summer street, Lynn, was in Chelsea Court today on the charge of drunkenness and operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. His case was continued in $300 until November 17. Cameron was arrested Saturday night on the Revere Beach Boulevard after the automobile he was driving had collided with a stone team, driven by Charles Cofford of Lynn. Cameron was badly bruised.

CENTRAL N. E. STORY AT NEW HAVEN TRIAL

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—The government today entered practically upon the last lap of its prosecution before Federal Judge Hunt of William Rockefeller and other millionaire former directors of the New Haven charged with conspiracy to violate the Sherman anti-trust law.

Mr. Mellen was recalled to the witness stand just before luncheon recess. He first testified that President John M. Hall of the New Haven consulted him by letter while he was with the Northern Pacific about certain expansion policies begun by Mellen, which the New Haven wanted to carry out. Mellen advised the purchase of the Central New England which owned the Poughkeepsie bridge.

Chester W. Chapin, at one time president of the Central New England, with apparent reluctance told the story of the relations between the New Haven and his road.

It appeared that in Connecticut, in the path desired by the Central New England for a right of way, was a strip of ground a mile long and not more than forty rods wide, known as the "Montague farm," which the railway could not obtain permission to cross.

"What did you do?" demanded Batts.

"Appealed to the Legislature," Chapin said.

"What happened?" asked Batts.

"Nothing," was the laconic answer.

"Then what did you do?" persisted Batts.

"Built around it," said the witness.

"What next?" pursued Batts.

"President Hall gave us permission to cross the Montague farm," said Chapin.

On cross-examination Chapin stated that the New Haven sold to the Central New England the desired right of way through the Montague farm, and also the admission that in those days (1899) such conflicts between railroads were not uncommon and were considered "part of the game."

Chapin sold his 200-mile railroad to the New Haven at the direct personal solicitation of J. Pierpont Morgan.

Germany Denies Making Bogus U. S. Passports

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Germany's reply to the United States' demand for an explanation about the alleged use of fraudulent American passports by German spies has been received at the State Department, it was learned this afternoon. While the text of the reply has not been given out, it was learned that Germany fails to explain how two German spies who were executed in the Tower of London had fraudulent American passports.

Germany denies, however, that her agents have manufactured fraudulent passports. In her reply the German government also makes a counter charge that the Belgian authorities have forged American passports. Germany asserts that a plant where American passports were being turned out by Belgians was captured by Germany last Fall.

Memorial Service for Bishop Codman

The Rev. Dr. William H. van Allen rector of the Church of the Advent, praised the intellectual honesty of the late Bishop Robert Codman of Maine at a memorial service today in that church. Fifteen Episcopal ministers were present. Dr. Van Allen said: "You know where to find him upon all the fundamental questions. Back of it he had a judicial mind which helped him greatly in his ministry. He was sympathetic with all classes."

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Evidence that Germans in the western part of the United States are offering for sale passports that will enable holders to enter Great Britain has come into the hands of the Home Office, and as a result the British government will soon ask Secretary of State Lansing for help in breaking up the system.

Stanley Webb, a Cornish engineer, employed in Detroit, notified British officials of the system when he landed at Liverpool, and his information was forwarded to the Home Office.

UNITED STATES GIVES BRITAIN WARNING SEIZURES OF NEUTRAL SHIPS MUST STOP

tics and attribute to them the choice of adjectives and tone of expression not usually found in formal intercourse between the governments of great peoples."

The Daily News take a more cheerful view of things. This paper comments as follows:

"We have not the smallest apprehension of grave differences between ourselves and the United States. We can appreciate fully the disabilities inevitably imposed upon neutral shippers and we do not complain that their case should be presented in forcible terms. On the other hand, however, we believe America is not blind to the difficulties forced upon us by the ambiguities of international law and the unceasing endeavors of the Germans outside of Germany to circumvent the restraints we laid on German trade."

"Just when our sea grip on Germany has begun to take full effect and shatter the enemy's economic conditions the United States reiterates its demand that our navy relax is hold,' says the Express. "This is the effect of the latest American note. There have been other notes occasioned by premeditated murder of women and children, many of them Americans and these notes were invariably polite and restrained. However, we shall make no comparisons."

The Chronicle declares that unless Germany can be blockaded through neutral ports she cannot be blockaded at all.

BLOCKADE ILLEGAL, DECLARES U. S. NOTE TO GREAT BRITAIN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The long-delayed note from the United States to Great Britain protesting against unwarranted interference with American trade at sea was made public this morning here and in London. It states that the United States was at first inclined to view the British measure with leniency because of assurances that inconveniences to neutral trade would be minimized.

"This government is now forced," the note continues, "to the realization that its expectations were based on a misconception of the intentions of the British government.

"The United States cannot with complaisance suffer further subordination of its rights and interests."

GROUND FOR INDEMNITY.

Reciting a great list of Great Britain's "increasingly vexatious" interferences with American ships and cargoes, the note declares flatly that the United States will not recognize the so-called blockade established over Germany and adjacent countries, characterizing it as "ineffective, illegal and indefensible."

Refusal to recognize the blockade instituted under the order-in-council means that every seizure or detention will be held ground for indemnity.

Ambassador Page is instructed to impress most earnestly upon the British government that:

1.—The United States must insist that the relations between it and His Majesty's government be governed not by a policy of expediency, but by those established rules of international law and conduct upon which Great Britain has held the United States to account when the latter nation was a belligerent.

2.—The United States unhesitatingly assumes the task of championing the integrity of neutral rights against the lawless conduct of belligerents, and to the accomplishment of that task it will devote its energies.

The right of Great Britain to include in their list of contraband certain articles, including cotton, will be dealt with in a separate communication.

In conclusion, after an argument on the law and facts, Secretary Lansing says:

U. S. CANNOT SUBMIT.

"I believe it has been conclusively shown that the methods sought to be employed by Great Britain to obtain and use evidence of enemy destination of cargoes bound for neutral ports and to impose a contraband character upon such cargoes are without justification; that the blockade, upon which such methods are partly founded, is ineffective, illegal, and indefensible; that the judicial procedure offered as a means of reparation for an international injury is inherently defective for the purpose; and that in many cases jurisdiction is asserted in violation of the law of nations.

"The United States, therefore, cannot submit to the curtailment of its neutral rights by these measures, which are admittedly retaliatory, and therefore illegal, in conception and in nature, and intended to punish the enemies of Great Britain for alleged illegalities on their part. The United States might not be in a position to object to them if its interests and the interests of all neutrals were unaffected by them, but, being affected, it cannot with complacence suffer further subordination of its rights and interests to the plea that the exceptional geographic position of the enemies of Great Britain require or justify oppressive and illegal practices.

"The government of the United States desires, therefore, to impress most earnestly upon His Majesty's government that it must insist that the relations between it and His Majesty's government be governed, not by a policy of expediency, but by those established rules of international conduct upon which Great Britain in the past has held the United States to account when the latter nation was a belligerent engaged in a struggle for national existence. It is of the highest importance to neutrals not only of the present day but of the future that the principles of international right be maintained unimpaired.

"This task of championing the integrity of neutral rights, which have received the sanction of the civilized world against the lawless conduct of belligerents arising out of the bitterness of the great conflict which is now wasting the countries of Europe, the United States unhesitatingly assumes, and to the accomplishment of that task it will devote its energies, exercising always that impartiality which from the outbreak of the war it has sought to exercise in its relations with the warring nations."

U. S. HOPE UNREALIZED.

The note is dated October 21, and acknowledges the notes of the British government dated January 7, February 10, June 22, July 23, July 31 (two), August 13, and a note verbale of the British embassy of August 6, all of which relate to restrictions upon American commerce. The United States says at the outset that it has delayed answering these notes in the hope that the purpose of Great Britain "to exercise their belligerent right with every possible consideration for the interest of neutrals," and of causing "the least possible amount of inconvenience to persons engaged in legitimate trade" would in practice not unjustifiably infringe upon the neutral rights of American citizens.

"It is therefore a matter of regret," says the note, "that this hope has not been realized, but that on the contrary, interferences with American ships and cargoes destined in good faith to neutral ports and lawfully entitled to proceed have become increasingly vexatious, causing American ship-owners and American merchants to complain to this government of the failure to take steps to prevent an exercise of belligerent power in contravention to their just rights. As the measures complained of proceed directly from orders issued by the British government, are executed by British authorities, and arouse a reasonable apprehension that, if not resisted, they may be carried to an extent even more injurious to American interests, this government directs the attention of His Majesty's government to the following considerations."

Here follow in numbered paragraphs the points made by the United States. Summarized, they are:

(1). The statistics presented by Great Britain to prove an increase rather than a decrease in American trade "fail to take into account the increased price of commodities resulting from a state of war or to make any allowance for the diminution in the volume of trade which the neutral countries in Europe previously had with the nations at war."

SEARCH OF NEUTRALS.

(2). Detentions by Great Britain have not been "uniformly based on proofs obtained at the time of seizures, but many vessels have been detained while search was made for evidence." The question has been one of "evidence to support the belief of—in many cases a bare suspicion of—enemy destination, or occasionally of enemy origin of the goods involved."

(3). Attention is directed with regard to search of neutral vessels at sea to the instructions issued to the naval commanders of the United States, Great Britain, Russia, Japan, Spain, Germany and France from 1888 to the beginning of the present war to show "that search in port was not contemplated by the government of any of these countries."

(4). An examination of the opinion of the most eminent text writers on the laws of nations shows "that they give practically no consideration to the question of search in port outside of examination in the course of regular prize court proceedings."

(5). Answering the assertion of Great Britain that the position of the United States in relation to search at sea is inconsistent with its practice during the civil war, the note says this is based upon a "misconception." A careful search of the records "show conclusively that there were no instances when vessels were brought into port for search prior to instituting prize court proceedings," and that captures were not made upon other grounds than evidence found on the ship under investigation, and not upon circumstances ascertained from external sources." It is here that Secretary Lansing appends a copy of the instructions issued to American naval officers on Aug. 18, 1862.

(6). In answer to the British contention that conditions relating to the size and seaworthiness of modern carriers justify bringing vessels into port, there is cited the report of a board of the United States naval experts, just made, in which it is declared that it is not necessary to remove "every package of a ship's cargo" to establish the character and nature of her trade, that the facilities for boarding and inspection of modern ships are, in fact, greater than in former times, and that to permit ships to be taken into port "would be a direct aid to the belligerents concerned in that it would release a belligerent vessel overhauling the neutral from its duty of search and set it free for further belligerent operations."

DESTROYS U. S. TRADE.

(7, 8 and 9). These points deal with new procedures in the prize courts the effect of which the United States complains is "to subject traders to risk of loss, delay and expense so great and burdensome as to practically destroy much of the export trade of the United States to neutral countries of Europe."

(10 and 11). These discuss the question of the burden of proof as to the noncontraband of goods consigned "to order," the United States arguing that none of the cases cited by Great Britain proves that the burden of proof can rightly be made to rest upon the claimants.

(12). The greatly increased imports of neutral countries adjoining Great Britain's enemies, "cannot be accepted as laying down a just or legal rule of evidence" that commodities are destined for re-exportation to the belligerents. Such a rule, it is argued, "offers too great opportunity for abuse by the belligerents," and is opposed "to those fundamental principles of justice which are the foundation of the jurisprudence of the United States and Great Britain."

(13). Attention is directed to the fact that Great Britain admits that her exports to neutral countries have also materially increased since the present war began. "Thus Great Britain," says the note, "concededly shares in creating a condition which is relied upon as a sufficient ground to justify the interception of American goods destined to neutral European ports. If British exports to those ports should be still further increased, it is obvious that, under the rule of evidence contended for by the British government, the presumption of enemy destination could be applied to a greater number of American cargoes, and American trade would suffer to the extent that British trade benefited by the increase. Great Britain cannot expect the United States to submit to such manifest injustice or to permit the rights of its citizens to be so seriously impaired."

(14). Whatever may be the conjectural conclusions drawn from trade statistics, the United States "maintains the right to sell goods into the general stock of a neutral country and denounces as illegal and unjustifiable any attempt of a belligerent to interfere with that right on the ground that it suspects that the previous supply of such goods in the neutral country which the imports renew or replace has been sold to an enemy. That is a matter with which the neutral vendor has no concern, and which can in no way affect his rights of trade. Moreover, even if goods listed as conditional contraband are destined to an enemy country through a neutral country, that fact is not in itself sufficient to justify their seizure."

(15). In view of these considerations, the United States announces that it has no other course but "to contest seizures of vessels at sea upon conjectural suspicion and the practice of bringing them into port for the purpose, by search or otherwise, of obtaining evidence," and adds that "relying upon the regard of the British government for the principles of justice so frequently and uniformly manifested prior to the present war, this government anticipates that the British government will instruct their officers to refrain from these vexatious and illegal practices."

RESTRICT HARRASSING.

(16). Directing particular attention to the so-called "blockade measures" imposed by the order-in-council of March 11, the British note of July 23 last is cited to confirm the intention "to establish a blockade." After over six months application of the blockade order, the note says, "the experience of American citizens has convinced the government of the United States that Great Britain has been unsuccessful in her efforts to distinguish between enemy and neutral trade."

(17). The practice of requiring a consignor to prove that his shipments are not bound to an enemy of Great Britain even when articles are on the embargo list of the neutral country to which they are destined, is characterized as "harassing to neutral traders."

(18). While the United States government "was at first inclined to view with leniency the British measures which were termed in the correspondence but not in the order-in-council of March 11 'a blockade,' because of the assurances of the British government that inconvenience to neutral trade would be eliminated by the discretion left to the courts in the application of the order-in-council and by the instructions which it was said would be issued to the administrative and other authorities having to do with the execution of the so-called 'blockade' measures, this government is now forced to the realization that its expectations, which were fully set forth in its note of March 30, were based on a misconception of the intentions of the British government. Desiring to avoid controversy and in the expectation that the administration of the order-in-council would conform to the established rules of international law, this government has until now reserved the question of the actual validity of the order-in-council of March 11, insofar as it is considered by the government of Great Britain to establish a blockade within the meaning of that term as understood in the law and practices of nations; but in the circumstances now developed it feels that it can no longer permit the validity of the alleged blockade to remain unchallenged."

BLOCKADE HELD ILLEGAL.

(19). Pointing out that in accordance with the Declaration of Paris in 1856 the effectiveness of a blockade is "manifestly a question of fact," the United States says it is "common knowledge that the German coasts are open to trade with the Scandinavian countries." The recent placing of cotton on the British list of contraband is spoken of as making it appear "that the British government themselves have been forced to the conclusion that the blockade is ineffective to prevent shipments of cotton from reaching their enemies, or else that they are doubtful as to the legality of the form of blockade which they have sought to maintain."

(20). Decisions are cited to show that it is an essential principle, universally accepted, that a blockade must apply impartially to the ships of all nations, and it is added that "if belligerents themselves trade with blockaded ports," the principle in the past has been that they cannot be regarded as effectively blockaded. These decisions are referred to "since it is a matter of common knowledge that Great Britain exports and re-exports large quantities of merchandise to Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Holland, whose ports, so far as American commerce is concerned, she regards as blockaded."

(21). The principles of the laws of nations, which forbid the blockade of neutral ports in time of war, embodied in that part of the declaration of London adopted by Great Britain as to blockade, are discussed, and several decisions of the British prize courts prior to the present war as well as the Matamoras cases in the American Civil War are recalled to support the contention of the United States.

(22). Measured by "the three universally conceded tests the present British measures cannot be regarded as constituting a blockade, in law, in practice, or in effect."

(23). Formal notice is given that the "blockade" which Great Britain "claims to have instituted under the order-in-council of March 11, cannot be recognized as a legal blockade by the United States."

CHARGES ARE DENIED.

(24). The British view of the famous Springbok case before the outbreak of the present war is cited to support the American contentions.

(25 to 53 inclusive). These deal exhaustively with the modes of judicial redress for citizens of neutral countries, and reach certain general conclusions. "The government of the United States," the note says, "has viewed with surprise and concern the attempt of His Majesty's government to confer upon the British prize courts jurisdiction by this illegal practice of force in order that these courts may apply to vessels and cargoes of neutral nationalities, seized on the high seas, municipal laws and orders which can only rightfully be enforcible within the territorial waters of Great Britain, or against vessels of British nationality when on the high seas. * * * The United States government feels that it cannot reasonably be expected to advise its citizens to seek redress before tribunals which are, in its opinion, unauthorized by the unrestricted application of international law to grant reparation, nor to refrain from presenting their claims directly to the British government through diplomatic channels."

Secretary Lansing, moreover, denies in this connection that the charges, such as pilotage, wharfage, unloading costs, etc., against a detained vessel must be paid by the claimants, and adds that the United States is "loth to believe that such ungenerous treatment will continue to be accorded American citizens." Any waivers of indemnity exacted from American citizens "under such conditions of duress," it is declared, cannot preclude them from subsequently obtaining redress through diplomatic channels.

Declaration of U. S. in Refusing to Recognize British Blockade

From Secretary Lansing's Note to Great Britain.

I believe it has been conclusively shown that the methods to be employed by Great Britain to obtain and use evidence of enemy destination of cargoes bound for neutral ports and to impose a contraband character upon such cargoes are without justification; that the blockade, upon which such methods are partly founded, is ineffective, illegal, and indefensible; that the judicial procedure offered as a means of reparation for an international injury is inherently defective for the purpose; and that in many cases jurisdiction is asserted in violation of the law of nations.

The United States, therefore, cannot submit to the curtailment of its neutral rights by these measures, which are admittedly retaliatory, and, therefore, illegal, in conception and in nature, and intended to punish the enemies of Great Britain for alleged illegalities on their part. The United States might not be in a position to object to them if its interests and the interests of all neutrals were unaffected by them, but, being affected, it cannot with complacence suffer further subordination of its rights and interests to the plea that the exceptional geographical position of the enemies of Great Britain require or justify oppressive and illegal practices.

The government of the United States desires, therefore, to impress most earnestly upon His Majesty's government that it must insist that the relations between it and His Majesty's government be governed, not by a policy of expediency, but by those established rules of international conduct upon which Great Britain in the past has held the United States to account when the latter nation was a belligerent engaged in a struggle for national existence. It is of the highest importance to neutrals not only of the present day but of the future that the principles of international right be maintained unimpaired.

This task of championing the integrity of neutral rights, which have received the sanction of the civilized world against the lawless conduct of belligerents arising out of the bitterness of the great conflict which is now wasting the countries of Europe, the United States unhesitatingly assumes, and to the accomplishment of that task it will devote its energies, exercising always that impartiality which from the outbreak of the war it has sought to exercise in its relations with the warring nations.

COTTON INTERESTS NOT SATISFIED BY THE BRITISH NOTE

By International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—Southern Senators and Representatives, already in the city for the opening of Congress next month, expressed keen disappointment today over the failure of the note to Great Britain protesting against interfering with American trade to deal adequately with the cotton contraband question.

Legislators from Southern States who had expected a vigorous protest against placing cotton on the contraband list said that retaliatory measures against Great Britain would be pressed as soon as Congres assembles.

Legislators from the Southern States will not be alone in urging retaliation against Great Britain. They will have the support of the Chicago packing interests suffering from the confiscation of millions of dollars' worth of meat products by British prize courts which the United States in its correspondence with London contends proceeded illegally.

The Congressional representatives from the States which have suffered most from the manner in which Great Britain has enforced the order in council are satisfied with the Lansing note as a legal document, but those who have compared the note to Great Britain with the correspondence with Berlin growing out of the submarine controversy have noted in the latest document the complete absence of such phrases as "strict accountability" or deliberately unfriendly" or "Will omit no word or act."

INDOOR LIFE MAKES FAT

TAKE OIL OF KOREIN TO KEEP WEIGHT DOWN, OR TO REDUCE SUPERFLUOUS FAT.

People who are confined within doors and who are deprived of fresh, invigorating air and exercise must take precaution to guard against over-stoutness, as fat acquired by indoor life is unhealthy and a danger to the vital organs of the body. Lack of exercise in the fresh air weakens the oxygen-carrying power of the blood, so that it is unable to produce strong muscles and vitality and the formation of unsightly and unhealthy fat is the result.

If you are 15 or 20 pounds above normal weight you are daily drawing on your reserve strength and are constantly lowering your vitality by carrying this excess burden. Any person who is satisfied in their own mind that they are too stout should go to a good druggist and get a box of oil of korein capsules, and take one after each meal and one just before retiring at night.

Even a few days treatment should show a noticeable reduction in weight, digestion should improve, energy return, footsteps become lighter and the skin less flabby in appearance.

Oil of korein is inexpensive, cannot injure, helps the digestion and is designed to increase the oxygen-carrying power of the blood. Any person who wants to reduce their weight 15 or 20 pounds should give this treatment a trial. There is nothing better.

When a cold grips your system it is convincing proof that your condition is weakened—remember that. It is risky indeed to simply trust your strength to throw it off, because neglected colds have brought more serious sickness than any other one thing, while weakening cathartics and stimulating syrups are often depressing and dangerous.

The one best treatment for any cold—the one so often relied on when others fail, is the powerful blood-nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, which feeds the very sources of bodily strength to suppress the present cold and generate strength to thwart further sickness.

SEARCH FAILS IN SCITUATE DEATH CASE

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 8.—The body of the man found half buried in the Scituate woods with a bullet-hole through the heart will be held pending further investigation by the Attorney-General's department.

Medical Examiner Dr. Harry W. Smith of Scituate believes the man was murdered.

A thorough search of the woods by deputy sheriffs all day Sunday failed to uncover any clew.

Sheriff Wilcox is not satisfied the dead man is not James F. Hughes, who is said to have given information to the State in the Knowles case Labor Day.

"I have been trying to find Hughes to talk with him, said Sheriff Wilcox today.

Owing to the condition of the body the medical examiner said it was impossible to tell the height or age of the dead man. One thing the medical examiner is convinced of and that is that the man met his death within two months.

According to A. J. Farrow, on whose farm the body was discovered, no one recalls hearing gun shots recently.

Deputy sheriffs have found great difficulty in searching the woods as the section is marshy. Every acre of the ground for some distance was combed by the deputies, assisted by neighbors.

"I have suffered from stomach trouble for 20 years, which took the form of indigestion and dyspepsia. My food would ferment in my stomach and cause gas, with great distress after eating, and my stomach was in such a weak condition that I could scarcely keep any food on it. I was nervous and restless and could not sleep at night, had dizzy spells, coated tongue, was constipated, my liver was torpid and sluggish, I had catarrh in my head and coughed all the time. I felt weak and miserable and had tried so many different medicines without relief that I was completely discouraged and had no hope of ever getting relief. I read of Plant Juice in the papers, but was very skeptical of getting any benefit from it, as I had tried so many. However, I got a bottle and after taking a few doses, it gave me immediate relief. I have now taken four bottles and feel like a new woman, have no more stomach trouble or catarrh in my head, all my aches and pains are gone, and I sleep well at night. I will gladly recommend Plant Juice to any woman."

'Three-Fingered Jack' Is Missed; He Died in Jail

"Three-fingered Jack," a character well known to business men in the vicinity of Bromfield and School streets, died Saturday night in Charles Street Jail.

"Jack" was known as a free lance man of all trades. He had been a familiar figure in and around the buildings bounded by Tremont and Washington, and Bromfield and School streets. He was an emergency man when no one else was to be found to run an errand or make a necessary repair. If he wasn't on hand when wanted a sign was hung in the window for him as he made his rounds. If more than an hour elapsed before he appeared it was generally guessed that the law had dealt unkindly with him the night before. However, after "Jack" had paid the penalty exacted by the law he again returned to his district.

For his sleeping place he had prepared a bunk in a loft of one of the buildings. Often a pal in desperate straits shared with him his humble lodging. "Jack" had a fellow-sympathy for "down-and-outers."

It was said he was a college graduate. He was fifty-eight years old. his name was John D. Hawthorne.

LIQUOR DEALERS OPEN CAMPAIGN FOR LICENSE

Big liquor interests of the country, acting through a recently-formed organization known as the Liberal League of Massachusetts, have begun a secret fight against no-license in Boston.

As the first step of its campaign, the Liberal League has decided to require the liquor employes in Boston to line up against no-license at the city election in December.

Every employe who fails to turn out and vote for license on December 14 will be reported to his employer by Liberal League agents, who will be at work in every precinct in the city.

In a circular letter to the liquor dealers announcing the plan of campaign, the league admits the danger of a great no-license vote in Boston. The campaign is intended to offset the keen resentment against the liquor interests for co-operating with the Republican machine in the State election.

CHECK LISTS TO BE KEPT.

The circular follows:

Gentlemen—On account of the active efforts being made in favor of prohibition it is necessary, this year, to see to it, that a strong vote is cast for license.

This will be an "off year" in the city election, as there will not be a Mayor to elect, and no strong reason for the average voter to go to the polls.

For this reason it is necessary that all voters employed in the business should vote. We ask your assistance in this direction.

We inclose a blank form and stamped envelope for your reply, and ask that you give us the name and address of every male employe. Our intention is to see that every one of them vote, that has the right to do so.

If any of them fail to vote you will be notified of the fact, as a check list will be used in every precinct.

In this way we can advise you of any neglect of your employes to protect their own interests and yours.

We ask that you give this your prompt and early attention so we can complete our files, and notify all employes before election—TUESDAY, DEC. 14, 1915.

Respectfully yours,
Liberal League of Massachusetts,
Geo. J. Wilkinson, Secretary.

AIMS OF THE LEAGUE.

The Liberal League is officered for the most part by agents of the distilling interests. The president, J. J. McCaffrey, of No. 122 West First street, is an agent for the Charles Bolt distilleries. John J. Collins, the treasurer, is a bookkeeper of the Callanans in Boston. George J. Wilkinson, the secretary who signed the circular, is the agent in Boston for the Lechmere and Jacobi distilleries in California.

Vice-President F. Chandler Young is an employe of the August Thiel interests, and the financial secretary, John J. Wright, is an employe of W. H. Jones & Co., wholesale liquor dealers, on Hanover street.

They have organized their campaign with Nicholas Fairclough of No. 170 Summer street as chairman of the campaign committee. Mr. Fairclough is Boston agent of the National Distilling Company.

"We have about 1,500 members in this State, although we are a comparatively young organization," said Mr. Fairclough today. "They are mostly clerks."

"You mean bartenders?" Mr. Fairclough was asked.

"Yes," he replied.

"The prohibition forces are organized," Mr. Fairclough continued, "and there is no reason in the world why the people in this business should not organize to help themselves. We are in a legal business.

"Our only purpose is to fight prohibition. We are not going to take any sides in any contests between candidates."

Jersey Police Refuse Credit To T. R.'s Son

UNION HILL, N. J., Nov. 8.—Quentin Roosevelt, son of the ex-President, tried in vain to obtain credit for $25 on the strength of his name at the Union Hill police station Saturday, it became known today. He was speeding along the Hudson boulevard, on his way to the Harvard-Princeton game, when he was stopped for violating the speed laws.

His auto was stopped by Motorcycle Policeman George Schlem, who told Guy Brandon, Mr. Roosevelt's chauffeur, that he was making thirty miles an hour. Mr. Roosevelt protested, but the policeman was unmoved when informed that he had stopped a son of Mr. Roosevelt.

At the Union Hill police station a police lieutenant held the chauffeur in $25 bail. Mr. Roosevelt, with a smile, handed his card to the lieutenant.

"Isn't that name good for $25?" he asked.

The lieutenant gravely surveyed the card. "It's a good name, all right," he said. "But it's not good for $25."

Mr. Roosevelt, who had only a limited amount of money with him, silently produced $25, and that was the reason he was late for the game.

"Billie" Burke Gets Back $8,000 Ring

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Miss Billie Burke, the actress, was overjoyed by a message from San Francisco. It said the $8,000 diamond ring stolen from her recently in that city had been recovered. Reber Isgien, alias Johnson, in whose possession the ring was found, is held by the San Francisco police. The ring was stolen from a hotel room. A $40,000 diamond necklace was overlooked.

"Mother, a word that means all the world to me." That is the title of the latest Broadway hit. It has been sung at Keith's by the clever team of Webber, Dolan and Frazer, who have special permission from Eva Tanguay to sing the song in Boston.

Miss Tanguay, whose songs are always clever, never overlooks a good one, and she picked up "Mother" immediately after it came off the presses.

The melody was composed by Theodore Morse and the words by Howard Johnson. It was put out by the Leo Feist Company.

Mother's popularity lies in the clever arrangement of the word "Mother" in the chorus. Each letter of the word stands for a different attribute of mother and the six letters represent all her goodness. Thus it goes:

M is for the million things she gave me.
O means only that she's growing old.
T is for the tears were shed to save me.
H is for her heart of purest gold.
E is for her eyes with love light shining.
R means right, and right she'll always be.
Put them all together, they spell "Mother,"
A word that means the world to me.

In the second verse other nice things about mother are introduced.

M is for the mercy she possesses.
O means that I owe her all I own.
T is for her tender, sweet caresses.
H is for her hands that made a home.
E means everything she's done to help me.
R means real and regular, you see.
Put them all together, they spell MOTHER,
A word that means the world to me.

Excise Board May Allow Dancing in Hotel Cafes

Tripping the light fantastic may become the proper caper—so to speak—in Boston's licensed and exclusive hostelries this Winter.

It appears that the Boston Excise Commission has greatly changed its attitude in the matter of allowing dancing in hotel restaurants where liquors are served, and that it may soon be permissible for hotels of the better class to allow their guests to dance, drink and eat in one and the same room.

Now that this has become generally known, several hotels where dancing has not been a part of the entertainment have fallen in line. It is said that, within a short time, dancing will be in order at every first-class hotel in the city.

First Mark-Down of the Season in

Lingerie Waists

Batistes, Handkerchief Linens and Voiles in Fluffy and Tailored Styles

Every waist this season's style and all are practically new merchandise. The markdown is necessary, however, to clear stocks for the waists on order and now coming in daily. Many are beautifully hand embroidered.

The Economics are Unusual and Positive

These reductions include about 625 waists—mostly one, two and three of a style. They are waists you will not see duplicated either in style or price. About 100 different styles.

In many stores lingerie waists are discontinued during the winter, but here it's an all-the-year-round proposition with new merchandise coming in daily.

At 1.50 we offer waists that sold originally for 3.00 in imported voile, pin striped in black, lavender, blue, green and white. Dainty semi-tailored models trimmed with bone ball buttons.

At 2.00 we have grouped some 250 waists that sold originally for 2.95, including batiste, voile and handkerchief linen waists—white, colored stripes and solid colors—both tailored and fluffy lingerie styles in all the new frills.

At 2.95 you will find many dressy styles in waists trimmed with various combinations of lace and embroideries, long sleeves; all this season's styles in waists that at 4.00 were good values.

At 3.95 are many high grade waists that were selling 5.00 to 8.95 originally, in fine voiles, dainty embroidery, lace trimmed high collars and low convertible collars—all good models.

Other Lingerie Waists at 1.00 to 45.00

He is a spectacular player, a good ground gainer, a man who never can be given enough work, tireless as an Indian. He is a tough customer for any man to tackle on the football field.

It is doubtful if Harvard tries to pile up a big score on Brown with Yale so close and football so uncertain.

Down at New Haven about the only improvement noted in the Blue team is the apparent effort upon the part of the players to get going as a machine.

SHEVLIN HARD AT IT.

They didn't show much and may not be able to against Princeton, but it is a safe bet that Shelvin and the other coaches will whip the Bulldog into far better shape than it is now for the struggle with the Crimson.

Yale's spirit in the team has made itself manifest to a small degree, but even though small it is an arrow pointing to what Shevlin has been able to inspire in the men, which before his arrival was lacking entirely.

Princeton's weakness appeared to be in her inability to get started. The surprise in the transformed Harvard team was the quickness in every department. Out of a rather dishevelled squad in previous games Haughton brought them into a team, with team play.

This in itself will be a factor against Yale. Harvard's line is stronger defensively and offensively than the Eli's, its backfield is by far the class, and with Mahan to drop kick there is nothing to dispel the dream of a Crimson victory on November 20.

'TIS DANGEROUS TO DOPE.

Princeton, smarting under the lash of defeat in a splendidly played game, looks forward with relish to the thought that they have Yale to meet. What will happen? The Tigers should win, but doping football, or baseball for that matter, is dangerous work.

When the returns come in, the other fellow has the second guess, and "I told you so." Yale fumbles badly, while this fault has been corrected in the Harvard squad and Princeton is reasonably sure in this particular. The Tigers certainly have it on Yale in the handling of punts and in running back of kicks.

Dartmouth came through in fine form for its supporters, making a spectacular finish, proving that the last few minutes of a game are as fruitful as any in the entire battle. Coach Cavanagh is to be congratulated for the work he is doing with his men.

Next in importance to the big college games of the week stands the annual Exeter-Andover game, which this year is played at Exeter on Plimpton Field. The P. E. A. boys have a fine team this season and stand to win by a very wide margin.

SITUATION AT ANDOVER.

The system tried at Andover, of heavy class football teams in competition until late in the season of preparation, has largely interfered with the perfection of a strong eleven.

The boys chosen appear not to have had proper direction in team work, due to limited time. However, this game is always a merry spectacle, a miniature Harvard-Yale contest, for many of the players who battle for P. A. and P. E. A. later find their way to Yale, Harvard and Princeton. Names famous at P. E. A. and P. A. become as famous in the life of the big universities' sporting history.

An interesting note in connection with this schoolboy classic is that neither in baseball nor football has an Exeter team been beaten on Plimpton Field since its dedication in 1909 when the nine captained by Dana Wingate, afterwards twice captain at Harvard, beat Andover by the score, 5 to 3.

Little Gloom at Princeton; Rush Remains an Idol

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 8.—All the members of the Princeton football varsity and many of the scrubs took a train for Atlantic City immediately after the Harvard game Saturday, where they remained over Sunday, returning today.

Except for the usual bruises and general exhaustion from a game such as that on Saturday, all the Princeton players are in excellent physical condition. Gennert and McLean suffered a few minor injuries, but it is certain that they will be back in the line when practice is resumed.

Contrary to custom, a light practice will be held this afternoon. Although the student body feels keenly disappointed because of Harvard's victory, there is no such thing as deep gloom in Princeton.

There is still the same strong feeling of confidence in the power of the team and the methods of "Speedy" Rush, the head coach.

Cornell Will Loaf Till Pennsy Battle

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 8.—Cornell is back from Ann Arbor, little the worse physically for its battle with Michigan Saturday, a battle the Sharpe machine won by a top-heavy score. The eleven will rest today and tomorrow and then start work for Saturday's contest with Washington and Lee. Cornell still has a clean record and it is now practically a certainty that it maintains its 1.000 mark.

Pennsylvania, which will be met Thanksgiving Day, is not feared, despite its good showing against Dartmouth. The student body is confident that it will be Cornell's title if it runs up a big score on the Red and Blue.

Exeter Starts Work for Andover Battle

EXETER, N. H., Nov 8.—In preparing for the annual game with Andover, Exeter will put in a busy week's work. Injuries have done a lot of damage to the team in places where they are liable to be felt most. Campbell, the veteran halfback, will not play, and it is doubtful if Donnelley, the fast back from Montana, will be able to face the Blue.

The loss of Campbell will be keenly felt, as he has been running with the ball better than at any time since coming to Exeter. Coach "Tad" Jones will have to depend upon two Hartford boys, Benedict and Davis, to gain ground in the Andover combat.

Now Brown Is Bent on Flaying Harvard

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 8.—All is joy on the Hill, as Brown outfought and outgamed Yale Saturday and brought home the football. Now the slogan is "Beat Harvard." All Providence wants Coach Haughton to use his stars in next Saturday's game so that when Brown does land victorious it won't be over an eleven composed of second string men.

The players came out of the Yale game in good shape. Today's work will be very light. Then will come three stiff scrimmages for the Harvard conflict.

Harvard Eleven Is a G. B. Affair

Of the eleven men who started the game for the Crimson against Princeton, seven were Massachusetts boys and three claim Boston Latin School as a place of preparation for Harvard.

"Dick" King, whose 25-yard run scored the only touchdown of the game, is a Boston Latin School product. So is Ernie Soucy, who on the play before took a forward pass from Captain Mahan for a 25-yard gain. The third Latin School grad is "Billy" Boles, who started his first varsity game for the Crimson.

Hal Dadmun, left guard, prepared at Arlington, and Quarterback Don Watson did his prep.-day time at Milton Academy. Mose Taylor, right guard, is a Boston boy and prepared at Andover, the same school where Captain Mahan spent his earlier days.

Varsity Centre Wallace is a Los Angeles boy and prepared at the University of Southern California. Joe Gilman, left tackle, prepared at Exeter. His home is in Honolulu. Parson, right tackle, is a Hope Street High, Providence, recruit. "Dick" Harte is a Philadelphia boy, as is sub Quarter "Billy" Robinson. Both prepared at Pomfret.

In Harvard's varsity squad of thirty-seven, two are Bay State bred, and twenty-four prepared at private schools; Groton, with six, and St. Marks, with five members, excel in giving Percy Haughton varsity talent.

AFTER THE SHOW
VISIT
HAN

HAUGHTON'S TIP MAY HAVE WON FOR HARVARD

There was a moment in the Harvard-Princeton game when Percy Haughton himself took a hand, and by his strategy turned back the Princeton drive at Harvard's goal.

The way he communicated his instructions to Captain Mahan was a sharp instance of resourcefulness.

It was at the end of the third period. Princeton had been rushing the ball with tremendous power. In the second period, she rushed 45 yards in ten consecutive plays, then kicked a field goal. In the third period she rushed 70 yards in sixteen consecutive plays, and kicked another field goal. Her attack had Harvard baffled, and all but helpless, except when the Crimson line stiffened near the goal posts.

Harvard was still sticking to the conservative punting game, and whenever Harvard got the ball, Mahan was all but sure to fall back and punt.

HAUGHTON'S ORDERS.

Then came Haughton's move. There was less than a minute of the third period to play. Haughton sent in Harris as a substitute for Wallace at centre. After two rushes, the period ended. During the moment's rest before the next period, Haughton sent Wallace back in and called Harris out.

Wallace was out of the game only about a minute—just long enough to get Haughton's instructions and carry them to Captain Mahan. In substance they were:

"Stop kicking—play a rushing game—open up your new attacking plays."

The result was almost immediately apparent. Princeton was held near midfield, and punted out of bounds. The ball went to Harvard, on Harvard's six-yard line.

LUCK FAVORED CRIMSON.

Mahan fell back as if to punt—but instead, the play was a drive at tackle. A second time Mahan fell back, and a second time, Harvard tried a rush. Neither play gained appreciably. But these two instances were the first plays in the game when Harvard rushed the ball within her own twenty-yard line.

On the next play, Mahan punted—he was forced to. Then luck favored Harvard, for though the punt went outside on the thirty-two-yard line, Princeton fumbled on the next play and Harvard got the ball.

Then the attack Haughton had ordered began in earnest. Every play was delayed or concealed. A double pass, or some other tricky and deceptive move was tried. A fake pass made ten yards, a penalty cost fifteen, but three more tricky plays made a first down, then another first down, and the ball was well down in Princeton territory. Harvard finally lost the ball on downs on Princeton's twelve-yard line. But the Harvard attack ordered by Haughton had driven Princeton out of scoring distance.

BROKE UP TIGER OFFENCE.

The changed Harvard strategy broke up the powerful Princeton offence that at the beginning of the period had indicated another Princeton score. It is not impossible that the change in Harvard's tactics saved the game. It was Haughton who ordered the change, and his orders were conveyed by Wallace, called out for a minute as the third period ended, sent in as the fourth began with instructions.

It was a part of the hidden tactics that win football games.

HARVARD STARS HOME; PREPARE FOR BROWN

Tiger hunting, outside a little bulldog taming, is about the most profitable proposition that the Harvard football headsmen undertake annually. The Crimson gridiron nimrods are back once more in the old stockade after trapping the well-known Princeton curmudgeon, who, for the past six weeks, has been abroad seeking all of the football ilk that he could devour.

The Tiger pelt will be neatly tucked away with others of the same pattern in the Harvard trophy room and preparations started at once for the tumbling over of the Brown bear and the spanking annually administered to those good little boys down at Yale.

Harvard men are straggling back to town today and getting out to their classes in Cambridge. The morning trains from Fall River dumped out a lot of the young fellows who came from New York last night and that tired feeling of the cold gray dawn of the morning after made its presence felt in more than one befuddled head.

There is not likely to be much doing along football lines at Cambridge today. All the players who played against Princeton will be given a day to rest up, but the remainder of the squad will be expected to report at the Locker building for a short curtain lecture and an hour's light work out of doors.

VARSITY SQUAD O. K.

The majority of the Harvard players stuck through the whole Princeton "at home" Saturday afternoon, and, while not mussed up very badly, are more or less weary.

"Dick" Harte picked up a bang on the head Saturday and will probably rest up until the game with Yale. Watson, whose fine quarterback play made the biggest kind of a hit with Coach Haughton, worked all through the contest, though handicapped by illness. He will probably give Yale a look-over next Saturday, leaving the job of piloting in the Brown game to Billy Robinson.

It would not be surprising to find a team practically made up of subs lined up against the Providence collegians. Coach Haughton has generally used this game to try out his subs under the excitement attendant on a public appearance before a big crowd in the Stadium.

SOUCY AND HARTE STAR.

In only one instance did his judgment go astray. That was in 1911, when the Carlisle Indians, who were met instead, sewed up the game before the Harvard regulars were trotted into action.

Soucy and Harte both played grand ball Saturday, but Coolidge, who relieved Harte when the latter was hurt, played even better than the blonde Philadelphian. Harte's best asset is the clean way he handls forward passs.

Carlisle Indians Come Out of H. C. Battle Unmarked

CARLISLE, Pa., Nov. 8.—The Carlisle Indians returned home yesterday afternoon in good physical condition, notwithstanding the hard contest against Holy Cross in Worcester on Saturday.

The officials and coaches were much pleased at the outcome of the game, as Carlisle for the first game this season showed the dash and whirlwind play that carried the team to victory in former years.

The officials are also aware that it was only a combination of fumbles in the second half that allowed Holy Cross to score and they came back so strong in the last period that the redskins were unable to make points themselves.

This week the coaches will work the Aborigines hard in preparation for the Dickinson College game here Saturday.

Yale and Columbia Crews Race Friday

NEW HAVEN, CT., Nov. 8.—Both Yale and Columbia have done the bulk of their training in preparation for the first rowing race between the two institutions since July 14, 1895, and are ready for the real test in the respective opinions of Coach Guy Nickalls of the New Haven crews, and Coach James C. Rice of the New York navy.

Columbia won that last race. Because, however, of the showing of the Blue crew last June, when it paddled across the finish line at New London a winner over Harvard by seven lengths, Yale is considered by most of the experts to be the slight favorite.

The crews that row Friday afternoon in New Haven harbor will not be the same in personnel as those of last June. Yet their relative strength is nearly the same. Columbia has improved much in the last month, but isn't the best crew that Rice could develop if he had all the men who are eligible to row. Only Captain Bratton and Diekmann of last year's crew are in the varsity boat.

Ward Going West to Attend Fed Meeting

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—George S. Ward, recently elected president of the Brooklyn Federal League Club, succeeding the late R. B. Ward, will attend the Federal League meeting in Indianapolis tomorrow. Reports of scouts who have been rounding up the best of the minor league stars and some of the cream of the majors will be heard.

The player list will not be made public because of President Gilmore's belief that such procedure would again lead to efforts by the opposition to encourage actual contract jumping.

DADMUN PRAISED FOR STARRY DEFENCE

By TOM THORPE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Percy Haughton's pupils were better versed in the fundamentals of football than "Speedy" Rush's scholars and that is way Harvard won from Princeton in Palmer Stadium Saturday.

Time and again would this knowledge of the rudiments of the game prove of advantage to the Cambridge collegians. The clean handling of the ball on kicks, as well as in scrimmage plays, had more to do with Harvard's victory than anything else.

The sharp, hard tackling by the men who wore the bright crimson proved an advantage that Captain Glick and his teammates could not overcome.

Haughton has always insisted from the start of each season that his players master all the rudiments of the game before he would attempt to weld them into a football machine. This course of procedure has proven its worth on occasions too many to mention and was most apparent on Saturday.

HARVARD'S LINE PRAISED.

The Harvard team proved the victor because of the thoroughness of the style of play that Haughton has established at Cambridge. Tackle Gilman, Guard Dadmun, Centre Wallace and End Soucey were the stars of the Crimson forwards.

Gilman's playing was superior to that of the other linemen in the game. He opened holes sufficiently large for Mahan and King to get through and make substantial gains whenever called upon.

Dadmun's defence was the best work of its kind ever seen at Palmer Stadium. Nourse, his Princeton rival, also played exceptional ball.

McLean and Parisette, the Tiger tackles, played hard and well. McLean played himself out and was relieved later in the game by Larsen. This player immediately distinguished himself by breaking through and spilling the Harvards' back [illegible] they had really started.

Parisette played a steady game throughout. His kick-offs were worthy of much praise. If [illegible] players had been faster [illegible] down the field under [illegible] score might have been [illegible]

TIGER ENDS VERY SLOW.

Captain Mahan caught two of Parisette's lifts behind his goal line and on each occasion he ran back to the twenty-five yard line because the Orange and Black players delayed in getting down the field.

Rush will have to remedy this failure before next Saturday or else Captain Wilson of Yale will run many of the kick-offs back to the centre of the field. Wilson is the best man in the country in running back kick-offs.

Lamberton, at right end, outdid himself by his sensational playing. The tackling of this Tiger endman was one of the bright spots of the New Jersey team's play.

Twenty-two of the world's fastest riders today start on the first leg of their long journey in Boston's tenth annual six-day bicycle race at the Arena. The big indoor classic gets underway promptly at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The field is one of the speediest that ever entered a race of this kind and it would not be the least bit surprising if all existing records were wiped off the boards.

One of the unusual things about the group is the large amount of young blood distributed in the classy field. This means a fast pace from the beginning to the end, for the youngsters are always alive to opportunities to "steal" ground on the veteran pedalists.

Freddie Hill of Watertown and Alfred Grenda of Tasmania have been made favorites in the grind. Hill, paired with Goullet, captured last year's local race.

While many believe Goullet to be a faster performer than Grenda, the difference is hardly noticeable, for Grenda is undoubtedly one of the speediest men that ever pedalled a wheel.

Less than a month ago the big Tasmanian woodchopper smashed the world's quarter-mile record, which had stood for eight years.

One of the most feared combinations is McNamara and Spears, the Australians. McNamara was the runner-up in last year's race. Francisco Verri, the Italian, paired with Frank Corry, another Antipodean, will also bear close watching.

Racing will start every day, except Saturday, at 4 o'clock and will continue until 2 o'clock the next morning. Saturday's hours will be from 12:30 to 10:30.

THE "RABBIT'S" COLUMN

By Walter J. Maranville

SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

"Rube" Marquard is going to school next Spring, I hear. The institution he plans to attend is Professor Jack Coombs' Academy of Hurling, which will open on the first day of the Brooklyn Nationals' training trip. The Coombs school will be there anyway, even if Marquard doesn't trail along with the Robinson crew. The elongated pitcher, who had a narrow escape from going to Toronto when Johnny McGraw cut the so-called $11,000 lemon adrift, may stick out the coming year with Brooklyn. And he may be dropped and lose out as a big leaguer.

Marquard says: "I learned more about pitching from watching Coombs perform than I did in all the time I was with the Giants. Next Spring I intend to profit all I can from what Jack can show me. I joined the Robins late in the 1915 season, but not so late but what I could appreciate the wonderful work Coombs was doing with Manager Robinson's hurling staff. Even if he shouldn't be able to throw another ball—and Jack's come-back is one of the most genuine in recent baseball history—he would be worth a fortune in teaching the young Brooklyn pitchers, myself included, things they don't know about the fine points of work on the mound."

* * *

This is certainly a good, sportsman-like statement by "The Rube." Coombs who has a fine contract with the Robins, can not only tell a fellow how to pitch, but he can go in there and illustrate how it should be done. Coombs tells me that whatever success he has had has been due to careful attention he paid to the counsel of the late Mike Powers and Lave Cross, and by watching and studying the twirling of "Cy" Young, "Bill" Dinneen and the lamented Addie Joss when this wonderful trio was going its best.

* * *

Even if Christy Mathewson cannot get that kink out of his arm in time to start next year's campaign, he will be worth as much to McGraw as Coombs is to Robinson. It all goes to show that the ball players who make progress are the ones who are not above taking lessons from the leaders in the various specialties of the game.

REPORT SPEAKER SUFFERS CUT IN SALARY

Tris Speaker, the Red Sox's star centerfielder, whose massive two-year contract with the Boston Americans expired with the close of the 1915 season, has left for his home in Hubbard City, Tex. According to Speaker's friends he was not asked to suffer a cut in salary; a gash describes it much better.

Close friends of the famous outfielder, including ball players living in the vicinity of Boston, who always run into town for the Saturday gridiron battles, have it that Speaker was in anything but a happy frame of mind when he left for his home city last Wednesday.

They claim that Tris bemoans the fact that the Federal League is not hanging out the same big money it was offering the O. B. stars last Winter and Winter before last, as in his present frame of mood he would probably grab at the chance to get a lucrative berth with one of Gilmore's clubs.

Speaker doesn't see why he should be asked to accept much of a cut, as the Red Sox are not only a world's championship outfit, but if left alone, bid fair to be cocks of the walk for the next several years to come.

ENGLE WINTERING HERE.

Clyde Engle, the former Red Sox star, now allied with the Buffalo Feds, is in Boston and plans spending the Winter here. He's a great lover of golf and seldom misses spending a day on one of the outlying links.

Engle played sterling ball for the Red Sox for several years. He was at home on either first or third, proving himself an emergency infielder of unusual ability. It was only because his old New York contract, assumed by Boston, was a particularly pudgy one for an extra hand that he was allowed to desert to the "outlaws."

"The Federal League had an even better race than the National League the past season," states Engle, "and on the whole, business was good. They are treating the old crowd fine, though occasionally have been forced to let out an oldtimer. However, the bunch that has kept hustling has been well taken care of. The players missing out were 'stalling' and stirring up trouble."

FEDS HOLD MEETING.

At a special meeting called for Indianapolis tomorrow the Federal League forces will adopt some definite attitude toward the conditions of peace that O. B. seems willing to grant. This offered concession is no more than a bending from the stiff-necked policy that has prevailed from the start, just sufficient to let the financial powers of the independents buy into the alleged trust.

From the tone of Federal League remarks it appears that the outlaws finally have become convinced of the folly of trying to force an undesirable third major league onto the public. There is no room for such, certainly no demand.

GEORGETOWN CANCELS TURKEY DAY GAME WITH B. C. ELEVEN

ELATED by its victory over Fordham University, its first triumph on the new Alumni Field, University Heights, and pleased because it yields second place in the race for the championship of the Catholic colleges, Boston College starts today on its final week's practice of the season.

THE Maroon and Gold will play Connecticut State at Storrs next Saturday, and, judging from last Saturday's glistening performance, should register an easy victory.

THERE is a possibility that Boston College will meet Middlebury, or the University of Vermont, at University Heights, Thanksgiving Day, in place of Georgetown, which has cancelled its date.

LOWNEY, the star of the Fordham game, was injured in the final period, but will be back in his togs in a few days, it is expected.

THE return of Vin Murray, the crack centre, who had his hand broken in the Maine contest, strengthened B. C. considerably, and, although he only played in the first half of the Fordham game, his passing was one of the features, and enabled Fleming to kick his field goal.

COACH MAHONEY'S experiment of putting Harry Kiley in at quarterback proved a great move, resulting in a general steadying of the eleven.

CAPTAIN JIM DUFFY played his best game of the season and showed much "pep" in directing the team at critical moments.

Duffy-Lewis Matched for Big Bout at Atlas

Jimmy Duffy, the Buffalo favorite and one of the speediest boys of his weight in the country has been matched to meet Ted (Kid) Lewis at the next meeting of the Atlas A. A.

Manager Lewis of the local club has shown rare judgement in securing Duffy as the opponent for the hard hitting Briton, and a fast battle is sure.

BREEZY BOXING BITS

TO hear pugdom followers who should know tell it, Ted (Kid) Lewis and Joe Mandot did not make weight when they lined up at the Atlas A. A. a week ago last Tuesday night, despite the fact it was announced from the ring they had pulled 135 pounds at 3 o'clock.

SO, mayhaps, Mandot had a wail coming upon his return to Chicago, where the Southland king holds forth. One of Eddie Murphy's old handlers gives out the info that he spent the day in Mandot's company before Joe went on with Lewis and that Joe told him he expected to give away a lot of weight, etc., etc.

MANDOT was lucky to stick the twelve rounds with Lewis, after being flopped for the count in the first frame. On what he showed in the last half of the mill the scrap would have been a good one if the New Orleans boy had not got away to such a miserably bogus start.

THE Atlas A. A., which is giving local boxing lovers a corking good show weekly, should clamp down the lid and make the visiting stars come in at the notches the matches are made. Either that, or be careful to see that its members learn the true figures.

MATTY BALDWIN comes to bat with the merry statement that he's out to try all over again and adds that he is in receipt of two lucrative New York bids and one big New Orleans offer.

THE veteran lightweight has never issued alibis, but he feels himself forced to tell why he was stopped in a round at the Atlas A. A. "I saw White's punch coming; tried to get inside; failed and zow-ee!" That's Matty's explanation.

BALDWIN is living the simple life at Springfield Centre and prophecies a sure come-back for himself just as soon as the promoters give him a chance.

New Orleans Will Send O.K. Miller Against Willard

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 8.—Announcement is made by Promoters Tommy Burns, former heavyweight champion, and Dominick Tortorich that a series of heavyweight battles will be fought here this Winter, Jesse Willard, heavyweight champion of the world, agreeing to meet the winner of the elimination contests at a figure much lower than $30,000, the exact amount of which the promoters will not announce.

Fulton will be sent against Coffey in the first bout. The winner of this bout will meet Moran. Then will come the real battle between the winner of this battle and Willard.

It is figured on staging the bout on Monday night preceding Mardi Gras. The battle will be fought in the New Orleans Baseball Park, because at the time the races will be running at the Fair Grounds.

Burns, who tentatively arranged the match, said that he was sure of a great battle between the survivor of the contest and Willard.

"This is one way of arriving at who is the best man," said Burns. "I have fought myself and I know."

Golf Pros in Match.

This afternoon, at Woodland G. C., Pat Doyle of Myopia and Jack Shea of Kernwood will play a best ball foursome against Pat Murphy of Salem and Larry Pator of Homestead. This is the rubber match, the score standing 1—1.

MAL SCOVIL MAY MISS TIGER BATTLE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 8.—Yale began the final week of work in preparation for next Saturday's Princeton game today when Tom Shevlin and the board of coaches resumed their labors.

While Saturday's showing against Brown was a distinct disappointment, the gloom which hangs over the Yale campus is not so impenetrable as it was Saturday night. Reflection on the part of the undergraduates has brought the conclusion that the Brown game was not a fair test of the coaching capabilities of the new staff of football mentors.

The most serious loss of the eleven would be that of Mal Scovil, whose work at fullback this season has improved steadily until now he is one of the most valuable men on the team.

In Saturday's game he sustained a compound fracture of the left thumb which may keep him out of the game the remainder of the season.

Scovil's place was taken by Guernsey, the star drop kicker. Guernsey is Scovil's equal on defensive play, but is not so fast on his feet. Aside from his substitution at fullback, there will be no changes in the back field for the Princeton contest, it is said.

Baldridge will return to left tackle today and Black will be back in one of the guard positions. Whether he will displace Jim Sheldon at right guard or will go to left guard, Kent being switched from left to right, has not yet been settled.

Higginbotham will resume practice today, although his injured ankle is not yet quite strong. Church, who was tried at left end against Penn, did excellently, and Moseley, who played the position for three weeks, is now ready to return.

Carman Has Spill, But Ready for Race

Clarence Carman, the Jamaica, L. I. flyer, who won the half-mile special at the Arena Saturday night, later falling and having a narrow escape from serious injury, is limping but slightly as a result of the spill and stated this morning he would compete in the six-day grind in company with "Bobby" Walthour, his team mate. Carman was more than pleased with his victory in the sprint race.

"Down at Revere all Summer I always had to go the full Derby distance in order to get the big end of the purse," states the famed professional, "but here I got first money in fifty-one seconds." Both Carman and Walthour are confident that they will either win first money in the big event or land second to the winning team at the worst.

Mr. Schwab Plans Buying Ball Club

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 8.—According to a report received here, Bethlehem, Pa., is likely to be represented in the New York State League next season. Charles Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, is said to be willing to take over the Albany franchise, but wants it understood that the Pennsylvania city will not play Sunday baseball, should it be taken into the league.

Mr. Schwab will insist that the games be started at 2 o'clock so that the men working on the night shifts would be enabled to attend the contests.

GEO. BRICK HAS COLUM UP IN AIR

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Col committee on athletics will again today to decide what ac will take in regard to the game, scheduled to be played on Field, next Saturday. It was said that five member the committee, two alumni, two un graduates and one faculty mem favored allowing Brickley to p The case, in the opinion of these representatives, because of its m ramifications, could not be settled all time by cancelling the game fact, some argued that such an might do nothing more than sti ill feeling between the two inst tions.

The best plan, they believe, w be to play the game and then start widespread campaign for unifor eligibility rules. The question is sure to come up at the annual meeting of the National Collegiate A. The four other members of the committee stand firmly for the cancellation of the game.

e HAPPIEST member of my ly—next, of course, to Mamma hine, now your guest—is my st little daughter, Martha.

My dear," I said to Martha this ning. "YOU appear to be very ppy! Here you are, singing and ling, without a care in the world. n't you miss Mamma?"

"Deed I do, Papa Sunshine," she plied, "but next Sunday I am going follow her to the home of every tle girl and every little boy whose apa brings home the Sunday MERICAN. And Sunday, you now, is only six days away."

"And on the Sunday AFTER that," aid Master Peter, "I join them."

Then Baby Bob began to cry gain. "When do the Wobby oo?" he asked, and I told him OME Sunday, just as soon as pos- ible.

Several times, today, I have half-regretted that I ever gave my consent to this plan of spending an entire Winter in New England. I know the boys and girls of New England are the best boys and girls in the United States, for Santa Claus told me as much with his own lips, and Mother Goose says so, and Old King Cole is sure of it; nevertheless I find myself longing for Florida, at this time of year, and I am not at ALL sure that we would not have been happier if we had all remained together and gone South with the birds.

The suggestion that we spend the Winter at YOUR house, you may remember, came from "Jim" Crow.

I met Mr. Crow, an hour ago, in front of the postoffice here. He had been chatting with Mr. Dove, our postmaster, and Mr. Pigeon (Homer Pigeon, his name is), the ASSISTANT Postmaster.

"What gets me," I confessed to Mr. Crow," is that one should ever hear YOU saying a good word for People."

"Take, for example," I went on, "the Farmer. What does HE say about the Crow family. What does the Farmer SAY about you? He calls you' ... songless rascal, a 'mischievous rogue.'

"What does the Farmer DO to you? He persecutes you with bounty laws; he chases you with shotguns; he tries to get rid of you with poison."

Mr. Crow laughed.

"Caw! Caw! Caw!" he laughed.

"Well," said I, "how about it?"

"My dear George Washington," said Mr. Crow, "the Farmer is not to blame. He doesn't understand, poor fellow. Some day the Farmer will come to realize the true value of the Crows to his industry and, in that enlightened day, there will be a Crow monument in every cornfield in New England!"

Well, that made ME laugh.

"Shucks," I said (for I CAN be extremely subtle at times, my dears), "Shucks! A monument to the Crow in every cornfield? My DEAR fellow, they have them ALREADY, only the Farmer calls them 'SCARECROWS!'"

"Our best friends," said Mr. Crow.

"No?" said I.

"Ab-so-lute-ly!" said Mr. Crow.

"And why not?" demanded "Jim" Crow. "Why not? What does the Farmer do for Scarecrow? Nothing! He sticks him out into the broiling sun without so much as an umbrella. He never gives him so much as a drink of cold water, or a morsel of food. He dresses him in all the cast-offs to be found in barn or garret. A lot the Scarecrow owes to the Farmer! Why, would you BELIEVE it, sir, I know Scarecrows who would have perished on duty if it were not for the kindly and generous hearts of charitable Crows. And I have never yet known of a single Crow to be captured, shot, poisoned or turned over to the authorities by a Scarecrow! Name me one such case and I'll sing a song for you!

"We owe the Farmer nothing," continued Mr. Crow. "We save his corn from the Grasshoppers. We save it again from the Cutworm. We fight the May-beetle for him, and other pests besides. If, then, we lay a SMALL tax upon his corn, we collect no more than we are entitled to. I believe you will find it written somewhere, in the Law, that the Ox which treadeth his master's corn is entitled to his share thereof."

The conversation might have been prolonged if, at this moment, three poorly clad strangers had not hobbled up to us. I thought they were panhandlers.

"Sh!" said "Jim" Crow, "here are three of the Scarecrow boys, now." And then he said, aloud:

"Mr. Sunshine, permit me to present my frends, Throw-His-Arms Gus, Straw-Neck Pete, and Wobbledy-Hobbledy Jack. Boys, shake hands with George Washington Sunshine!"

"I TRIED not to laugh, but they were the funniest-looking creatures I had ever met in the Land of Make Believe. I greeted the poor fellows as pleasantly as I knew how, and they soon set off together, "Jim" Crow with them, and as they turned the nearest corner, on their way to the Holly Tree Inn, young Mr. Crow was perched on the shoulder of Wobbledy-Hobbledy Jack and chattering away like a magpie.

As I wended my way homeward, to the establishment of the Old Woman Who Lives in a Shoe, I thought over what the Crow had said about his helpful work in the interest of the Farmer, and how little that was appreciated and how poorly compensated.

And I wondered if much of the trouble that Man brings upon himself in this world is not due to prejudice, to misunderstanding, and to a lack of appreciation.

I hope each of you will give my VERY best love to Mrs. Sunshine (Patience) and, if you would confer a particularly GREAT favor upon a lonely little husband, will you please ask her if she knows what EVER became of Martha's best shoes?

If velour is used for this suit four yards ($14.00) will suffice; three and one-half yards of satin would be required to line the coat ($4.38); findings, $1.25. Total, $19.63.

Their Married Life

Helen Meets Mrs. Stevens' Question With Poise and Gravity

Copyright, 1915, by International News Service.

"WHY, my dear," said Mrs. Stevens, bustling into the apartment, "this is the first I have heard anything about Warren's accident. Why didn't you let me know; perhaps we might have done something to help you."

"But there was really nothing to do," explained Helen. "Of course, I was terribly worried until I heard, but Bob did everything possible, and then we have insurance, so there is really nothing to worry about."

"But, my dear, I heard he was out with his stenographer."

Helen swallowed hard and turned her face away a moment. It was going to be harder than she had imagined to bluff it out. Then she turned to Mrs. Stevens calmly and said:

"Whatever did you hear such an absurd story. Of course, Warren is supposed to have done something behind my back, and I am supposed to be sunk in sackcloth and ashes meditating on a divorce. Is that the story?"

Mrs. Stevens was staring curiously at Helen.

"Do you mean to tell me that it isn't true?"

"Well, that depends upon how much you have heard, and what you believe."

"I am anxious to hear from the beginning, so hurry and tell me."

Helen was gaining poise as she went along, and now she continued promptly.

"Well, if you really did hear a weird story, all that I can do is to correct it. Warren did have Miss Evans out in the car that night, but would you mind telling me where you heard the fact?"

"Why, the men downtown were talking about it. Mr. Stevens told me about it, and, of course, Helen, I have not mentioned it to anyone. I understood that you would tell me all that I wanted to know. I remember the time that I came to you about Will. I shall never forget it, never."

Helen had no idea of confiding in Mrs. Stevens, much as she liked her for a friend.

HELEN MADE A BOLD EFFORT TO BE CALM

"The story goes," went on Mrs. Stevens, "that Warren had an acci [illegible] the road, [illegible] that you [illegible] charge the [illegible] so far?"

ated? Warren met Miss Evans as he was going to the lodge meeting. She had been having dinner with a girl friend and was hurrying home. She stopped before taking the car to telephone her mother out of town and, to her amazement, was told she was very ill.

"Then she missed the train and was frantic. Warren offered to take her home. He phoned me before he went, and I told him to go ahead."

"Then you knew where he was all the time?"

"Of course I did, but when he didn't come back until so late, of course I was worried. I knew something must have happened, and Warren didn't get a chance to telephone until late."

"Did he get her home in time?"

"Yes, the accident happened right near her house."

"Then it all falls flat if you knew about it and approved, and are not broken down because Warren deceived you."

"I actually believe that you wanted to find me miserable. I'm ashamed of you. No, I'm not broken down unless it is from worry. I think I grew about ten years older that night when I heard that Warren had had an accident."

"He wasn't hurt?"

HELEN CONFESSES SHE IS RATHER WORN OUT.

"Just a very little in comparison, his wrist was broken."

"You poor dear! Well, I must say that you look terribly worn out and tired."

"I am worn out and tired. I caught cold that night waiting up in negligee, and the excitement and everything has made me quite a wreck. I hope that youu will correct all these dreadful rumors that are floating around. You must see how embarrassing they are for me."

"Of course I do, dear, and I shall do everything in my power for you and Warren. I told Will that you would tell me the truth about it. We have been friends for so long."

Helen smiled again to herself, and then rose as Mrs. Stevens herself rose to go.

Helen's head felt dizzy and her mouth was parched and dry. She felt almost as though she had a fever.

"I hope, Helen, that you will take care of yourself and stay in the house while this cold lasts," Mrs. Stevens was saying. "You certainly don't look well; I am quite worried about you."

"I do feel miserable," Helen confessed honestly.

"Isn't there something I can do?"

"Not a thing, really; I am going to lie down now. I am so glad you came and told me the news. I should have worried if I had heard such a rumor from a stranger." And Mrs. Stevens, with a warm little kiss on Helen's flushed cheek, took her departure.

Helen staggered to a chair and sat down heavily. She did feel ill. How had she ever gone through with this terrible ordeal? It simply would not do, though, for her to be sick now; she must pull herself together and fight this thing through; and, with an air of exhaustion, she let her head drop against the pillow of the chair, while tears rolled down her cheeks.

How Worry Hurts You

WORRY has come to be a Nemesis of modern life. It is certainly unhealthful, so the doctors tell us, and it is known to injure the body.

If the medical men are correct, many of the most depressing of our physical ailments are due to worry alone.

The pulse of a worried man is irregular. It beats intermittently and its force varies greatly. He sighs frequently. His respiration is repressed. He is likely to be pale His extremities are cold.

There is but one meaning to this. Through the marvellous influence which mind exercises upon matter, the worry has gripped the heart, the circulation is impaired, and chronic heart disease is to be feared unless the worry ceases.

The stomach is likely to suffer also. The same worry which disturbs the heart's functions plays havoc with digestion often. Recent observations demonstrate that when one is in extreme anxiety there are relaxation and decreased motility throughout the entire alimentary tract. The appetite fails. Should the anxiety continue the subject is almost certain to become a confirmed dyspeptic.

The effect of worry upon the internal glands has not been fully studied. Enough is known, however, to assure the physician that it affects the secretions of these glands very seriously through the sympathetic nerves. It thus becomes an important agent in producing goitre and a train of other ills that can only be defined when the real functions of the glands in question are more adequately studied. Insomnia, a most fruitful source of physical ills, is a certain consequence of [illegible] Diabetes is often due to the

TO END CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you have Catarrhal Deafness or head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Any one who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.—Advertisement.

What Happened to Jane

Jane Writes to Ned and Tells Him That All is Over Between Them.

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

CHAPTER XXI.

Copyright, 1915, Star Co.

IT WAS characteristic of Jane Hardy not to look back when she had put her hand to the plough.

After the revelation made to her by her mother she felt that there was but on course possible to her. Only once did she waver from her unexpressed determination to do what was best for her parents. This was when she was alone at night.

She had asked to be allowed to go to bed as soon as the silent supper was over. Her father had eaten little, her mother less. As for herself, she could not swallow. She knew that Ezra expected her to say something definite as to her plans, but she could not do this yet. So, uttering a low "Good-night," she went up to her quiet room.

Here she lay in the dark and thought out her problem. Was her life not hers to live as she chose? But swiftly upon this definite question came the remembrance that her father and mother, too, must live. They had cared for her through all the twenty-one years since her birth. Now she must care for them. Were she to marry a poor man she could not do this.

If she married Edward Sanderson, he would insist on taking the responsibility of the support of her parents on his young shoulders. This he must never do. She would not hamper and bind him thus—no, not if she had to beg her bread first. The one thing she could not endure would be to see the man she loved harassed and careworn by bearing her burdens.

Were she to marry Augustus Reeves, the debts that were crushing her parents would be paid. Reeves was a rich man, people said. Somebody must be sacrificed. Let it be herself.

She fell asleep at last. It was past midnight when she was awakened by a clear ray of moonlight that had crept in through the unshuttered window and across her pillow to her eyelids. She sat up, startled.

"Oh, the moon—our moon!" she whispered. "Was it only last night that we saw it—he and I? Oh, Ned, Ned!"

JANE HAS A BITTER FIGHT WITH HERSELF

Throwing herself back on her pillow she cried softly but with an abandonment that left her exhausted. Finally, when the storm of sobs had spent itself, she crept to the window and looked out. The moon was far above the horizon. The trees were tiped with silver. The fir trees on the crest of Collins' Mountain stood out black against the pale sky.

"I can't give him up!" the girl moaned. "No matter what happens"——

The door of her room gave a warning creek and her mother crept in.

"Oh, Janie!" she murmured, stopping with a start at sight of the white figure by the window. "Are you sick, dearie? I thought a while ago I heard you moving about."

"No, I'm not sick," the girl replied. "But, mother—why are you up at this hour? Haven't you been asleep?"

The matron shook her head. In the pale radiance flooding the room Jane could see that the round face was blotched by weeping and that the lips and eyelids were swollen.

"What's the matter, mother?" she asked tenderly, a wave of compassion sweeping away her own self-pity. She put her arm about the elderly woman and drew her to the bed. "Sit down here, by me, dear," she urged. "You are tired out."

She felt strangely old, she told herself—older and more world-wise than this unhappy mother of hers. Life had been hard for Ezra Hardy's wife, as well as for Ezra himself. The daughter appreciated this now. She knew that her mother had suffered much, and that for years she had kept this from the child for whom she had worked and made sacrifices.

At the affectionate tone, Mrs. Hardy's tears burst forth afresh.

"Oh, Janie!" she sobbed, "I'm so wretched! You and pa are all I have—and you're both so miserable. He hasn't closed an eye tonight. He says we're ruined. And here you are grieving yourself sick, and—oh, I can't see what's going to become of us all. It means disgrace for us, or"—haltingly—"unhappiness for you."

In the period of silence that followed the younger woman renounced all that made life most sweet for her. It took only a few moments, but the decision was final. When she spoke, her voice was firm.

SHE MAKES HER GREAT AND FINAL DECISION

"Mother," she said, "you and father have done everything for me. I will not do anything that will bring unhappiness upon you. I—I—will try to do as you and he wish."

"But Janie"—the flood-gates of tears were once more open—"I want you to be happy—and if you can't be"——

"Please, mother," Jane Hardy interrupted, "don't use that word any more. I am tired of hearing about happiness. Let us talk of duty instead. You may tell father that I have made up my mind not to—not to—marry Edward Sanderson."

She said no more—not even when Mrs. Hardy threw her arms about her and kissed her passionately, calling her her "poor little girl." Instead she sat as if turned to stone. And when her mother left her she crossed the room swiftly and drew the dark shade at her window so that not a ray of the outer brilliance could penetrate to her room.

She had made her decision. Henceforward she would look no more at the shimmering moonlight.

The pale and practical dawn was lighting the world when she arose and dressed, and, sitting at her little desk, wrote a letter to Edward Sanderson.

All her plans were changed, she told him. He must forget her. She was not the girl he had believed her to be. She had decided that it would be best for her to marry another man. Their pictures of their future together had been but fancies. All she would ask of him now was that he would try to forgive her and would not communicate with her again. He would please regard this letter as an answer to his note to her father, as well as her unalterable decision.

Then, while her mother was building the kitchen fire, Jane slipped out through the front door and hurried down the road to the postoffice, where she dropped her letter in the slit at the side of the closed entrance. It was not seven o'clock, and the postmaster was not yet astir.

She returned to the house as noiselessly as she had left it, and, going up to her room, removed her hat, smoothed her hair and went down to the kitchen to help her mother prepare breakfast.

A Political Recipe

A farmer did not know what business to start his son in, so he put him in a room in which there was nothing but a Bible, an apple and a dollar bill. He decided that if he found the boy eating the apple he would make him a farmer; if reading the Bible, he would train him for the church, and if he had pocketed the money he would make him a stock broker.

Entering, he found the boy sitting on the Bible and eating the apple, with the money in his pocket.

He became a politician.

Precept and Practice.

Bert: "You got engaged last week, old chap, didn't you?" Fred: "Yes, my boy; but that's all off now." Bert: "Why—incompatibility of temper?" Fred: "Not at all—rather the reverse! She advised me to practice economy, and I started by getting her an imitation gold ring!"

Resinol Soap makes good complexions

When you wash your face do you realize that it is not enough to remove the dirt—that your skin needs a soothing, healing influence to preserve the natural beauty of your complexion?

Ordinary toilet soaps do not assert this influence. Many of them contain free alkali, which tends to dry the skin and destroy its delicate texture. Even the best of such soaps can only clean, they cannot heal and protect the skin. Resinol Soap, besides being an absolutely pure toilet soap, contains the same soothing, healing, antiseptic balsams as Resinol Ointment, the value of which in the treatment of skin affections is known throughout the medical profession.

That is why Resinol Soap does for the skin what cosmetics are supposed to do—it insures not only a clean skin, but a healthy skin, and a fair, clear complexion.

Resinol Soap is sold by all dealers in toilet goods. For sample free, write to Dept. 11-P Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were strong in the last hour, but markets were quiet. At 2:15 in New York gains included American Can 1, American Smelting 1¼, American Sugar 2, Beet Sugar 2¼, Agricultural Chemical 1⅛, after selling at its highest record price, U. S. Steel ⅝, Lackawanna Steel 1, American Locomotive 1⅛, Baldwin 1, Crucible 3⅛, General Electric ⅝, General Motors 20, Maxwell 3¼, Mexican Petroleum ⅝, Studebaker 1⅜, Westinghouse ⅝, Willys-Overland 2, Inspiration ⅛, Chino ⅜, Anaconda ⅜, Atchison ½, Canadian Pacific 1⅝, Chesapeake & Ohio ⅝, New York Central ¼, New Haven ½, Northern Pacific ⅜, Pennsylvania ¼, Reading ½, Southern Pacific ½, St. Paul ½, Union Pacific ¼, Erie ⅝ and Rock Island ⅝.

Among declines were Allis-Chalmers ½, Car & Foundry ⅝, Bethlehem 7, Tennessee Copper ¼, Utah ⅛, Baltimore & Ohio ⅛ and Missouri Pacific ½.

The list was then below its high for the day and receded further before the close, there being profit taking on a large scale in the afternoon.

In Boston United Fruit was up 3½, Atlantic Gulf preferred 1⅛, common ⅛, U. S. Smelting 1¼, Shoe Machinery 1, Tamarack 4, Butte & Superior ⅛, American Zinc ⅝ and New Haven 1. Alaska Gold was off ⅝. Coppers were irregular as a class and grew weaker later.

The Boston Bank statement shows a decrease of $656,000 in cash excess for last week.

STOCKS SOON RALLIED.

Prices were irregular in New York at the opening, but soon rallied, the improvement reaching all classes. Bears were aggressive at first because of the blockade note to England, claiming it would result in international complications. But demand, which had been light, began on the decline. Offerings were quickly absorbed and the market became strong. The tone continued good all the morning and over the noon period. But trading was not active. Transactions for the forenoon totalled about 360,000 shares. Rails and coppers soon advanced, as did a number of war industrials, which had been the weakest class, Crucible, Baldwin, Lackawanna Steel, American Can, Studebaker and Westinghouse being among the strongest. Roads to show good gains included Canadian Pacific, St. Paul, Erie, "Katy," Reading, Rock Island, Southern Railway and Union Pacific. Chino was an upward copper. U. S. Steel was not very active, but was higher after the early recession.

It is said the market is now in a better technical position and that the latest reactionary period is over. One assumption is that large interests will buy rails and coppers more freely. Sentiment toward the latter is especially confident. As regards war stocks margin requirements are believed to have shaken out about all weak holders. Among issues which had advanced two points or more by noon were American Smelting and American Sugar. Western Union was also up. Sterling exchange opened firm. October foreign trade is understood to have been the best on record. As to what railroads did last month is indicated by the increase of $454,221 in the gross of Illinois Central.

LOCAL COPPERS NOT ACTIVE.

In Boston local coppers were not so active as a group as last week. Tamarack was the feature. By afternoon it had advanced 4⅛. United Fruit was much in evidence. It opened weak and sagged further, but rallied and sold at its highest for this year. More than 6,000 shares of this issue were dealt in during the morning. Alaska Gold was active and weak. United Shoe made a good gain on a few transaction.

Copper metal deliveries on domestic and foreign account for October were on an enormous scale. One estimate is that surplus stocks at present total only about what is required at home and abroad in one month, according to the present rate of consumption. Prices are firm and producers are optimistic. Demand for lead and spelter is large and expected to increase. In London today spot copper was off 15s, and futures 12s, 6d., while electrolytic advanced 10s. Lead declined 2s. 6d. and spelter advanced £1 10s.

MOTOR NOTES

By J. C. KERRISON.

The four-day test of the Studebaker cars was 'naugurated this morning in Boston by Joseph Donovan of the Donovan Motor Car Company, when at 6:30 o'clock a stock touring car, carrying a party of newspaper men, left the Commonwealth avenue sales rooms bound for Providence.

For the next four days this particular car is to travel 250 miles a day between the hours of 6 a. m. and 6 p. m., making 1,000 miles in forty-eight hours of running time. In all of the larger cities the Studebaker agencies are carrying on the same test in order to ascertain just what can be done under different conditions in different sections of the country. The data produced by these tests wil be turned over to the Studebaker engineers for their edification, and the result cannot help but be decidedly interesting.

Special prizes are being offered for gasoline and lubricating oil consumption and the best general efficiency, each car being penalized for whatever adjustment, no matter how slight, its operator may be called upon to make during this test.

The Donovan Motor Car Company would be pleased to carry on the trip any interested persons, whether they be identified with the motor industry or not. At all times the car will be accompanied by an official observer.

A Government Convertible Bond

The Anglo-French 5% Loan is payable at maturity in 1920 in United States Gold Coin. Or at the option of the holder the bonds may be converted at par at any time at or before maturity into bonds having precisely the same security but bearing interest at 4½% and maturing in 1940, subject to redemption at par on and after October 15th, 1930.

The possible value of this conversion privilege can best be measured by comparison with prices and yields of other British and French government bond issues during the last fifty years. British Consols when selling at their lowest price yielded the same income as a 4½% 15-year bond selling at 110. At the highest price for Consols the equivalent price for a 4½% bond would have been 126.

A diagram illustrating the possible value of this conversion privilege will be sent upon request.

Price 98 and interest to yield nearly 5½%

CHEMIST BURNS FILMS IN CASE IN COURT

State Chemist Walter L. Wedger burned a piece of moving picture film, an ordinary camera film, and a celluloid collar button in the Roxbury Court today, to demonstrate the difference in their degrees of inflammability, in connection with his testimony in a test case brought against the New England Universal Film Company.

The film company was brought into court on charges of four violations of the regulations of Fire Prevention Commissioner O'Keefe.

Attorney J. B. Jacobs moved to have the case quashed, on the ground that Commissioner O'Keefe had no authority to regulate the care and manufacture of films. He claimed the law applied only to explosives and explosively inflammable material.

Mr. Wedger testified that films are exceedingly inflammable, and so subject to explosive burning that they come under this law.

Judge Ahern fined the company $200, $50 on each count, and the company appealed. The case will test whether film manufacturies come under the law giving the fire prevention commissioner his powers.

Autoist Released on Death Charge

Donald E. Studley of Reed street, Rockland, was in South Boston Court today on the charge of causing the death of ten-year-old Henry Fitzgibbons, Saturday, October 30, while Studley was operating an auto truck in Dorchester street. Judge Logan decided there was no evidence to show Studley was responsible for the death of the boy.

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

Mr. Bryan's Propaganda Is Very Dangerous, Even if Sincere

MR. WILSON has finally announced that he favors proper preparation for national defence.

Mr. Wilson's words were hardly out of his mouth when Mr. Bryan was in print with opposing declamation. We say declamation advisedly, because Mr. Bryan does not argue. He declaims.

Upon all questions Mr. Bryan is a fanatic. He always goes to extremes. In his peace propaganda he goes to even more unreasonable extremes than he usually goes.

The AMERICAN believes Mr. Bryan to be a real danger to the country. He is a wholly impracticable man, an unbalanced man, but a plausible man. Because he is a plausible man, he is apt to influence an element of the people that is swayed by plausible words, and that does not do much independent thinking of its own.

In this matter of opposition to President Wilson over the question of preparedness for war Mr. Bryan's sincerity is open to suspicion.

There is ground to suspect that Mr. Bryan's split with Mr. Wilson is based not so much upon Mr. Bryan's sincere belief in his peace propaganda as on Mr. Bryan's sincere yearning to succeed Mr. Wilson as President.

The first imbroglio between Mr. Bryan and Mr. Wilson began to develop about the time that the second-term movement for Wilson was started. Immediately after that Mr. Bryan seized the first opportunity—and not a very patriotic opportunity, either—to abandon the administration and to withdraw from the Cabinet.

Now Mr. Bryan has taken the first opportunity—and a still less patriotic one—to attack the President openly.

The inference is that Mr. Bryan intends to oppose Mr. Wilson's renomination. Another inference is that Mr. Bryan hopes to secure the nomination himself.

If these are not the motives underlying Mr. Bryan's opposition to national preparedness for defence, he has been extremely unfortunate in selecting the times to make his opposition public. The coincidences have been too apt not to excite suspicion.

But even assuming that Mr. Bryaa is sincere in his peace propaganda, he is, nevertheless, a dangerous influence, and could be, except for his sincerity, an entirely treasonable influence.

Not only the evidence of times past, but the chronicle of contemporary events, makes painfully clear the unhappy fate of unprepared nations. We are unable to see how any American can court a similar fate for our own dear country and still be a truly patriotic American.

Certainly no man who would deliberately subject his country to such a risk in order to advance his own personal political ambitions can possibly be truly patriotic.

We see what happens to nations which are not strong enough to resist armed aggression. The evidence is spread before our eyes this very hour. Look at Belgium! Look at China! Look at the predicament of Greece! It is as plain as plain can be that no nation has any secure rights except those which it is capable of defending and maintaining by arms—no political rights, no property rights, no human rights.

To preach against national preparation for defence after what we have seen done to the defenceless in Europe is to come perilously near to preaching treason. It surely is to preach against all the teachings of experience and all the dictates of good sense.

The first duty of a people is to maintain peace. The next is to prepare for war.

Preparednesss for war is the only insurance against war. It is as much the duty of a nation to insure itself against the ravages of war—the greatest disaster which can befall it—as it is the duty of an individual to insure himself for the benefit of those dependent upon him against death or against the destruction of fire.

To take out proper insurance is not to INVITE disaster, but to guard against the consequences of disaster.

Mr. Bryan affects to deplore the increased taxation that will come with increased preparation for defence.

Comparatively speaking, the money which this great, rich nation will have to spend for an adequate navy and army is not so much as any community spends for its fire department. And an adequate navy and army to defend us against the destruction of war are just as necessary to the nation as is a fire department necessary to a city to defend it against destruction by fire.

The assertion of Mr. Bryan that preparation for war leads a people to desire war is a foolish assertion.

The maintenance of a fire department certainly does not mean that the people who pay for it want fires. It means that they are anxious to prevent fires.

The maintenance of a police department certainly does not mean that the people who pay for it favor the commission of crimes. It means that they are anxious to prevent the commission of crimes.

Our army and navy are our national police to protect us from criminally covetous nations. They alone can guard us and enable us to live our life and to pursue our work in peace and in security.

To say that adequate preparation for defence would provoke war is as foolish as to say that a safe deposit vault would provoke robbery.

There are always thieves ready to rob among nations as well as among individuals, and robbery, whether by nations or by individuals, occurs when there is no proper protection, not when there is proper protection.

It is to be hoped that the good sense of the American people and the education they have received through this terrible war drama now being enacted before their eyes will enable them to appreciate the necessity for preparedness and to disregard Mr. Bryan's oratorical efforts.

Borrowers Should Study, Says Ella Wheeler Wilcox, The Etiquette of Debt

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

DEBT is a world malady which few of its denizens are able to escape. Sooner or later the burden of debt is incurred for a longer or shorter period of time. It is a misfortune but not a crime to incur debt.

The man who owes somebody has a much larger company with whom he associates than the man who lends.

So old and so almost universal is the position of the debtor that a Debtors' Union ought to be formed.

Every union, every organization of any kind, has its certain laws, formalities and obligations, both written and unwritten, which make what might be called the etiquette of the order.

The borrowers of the world need such a union, and are sadly in need of an understanding of its laws of etiquette. Here are a few outlines of those laws:

You who have asked and received money or influence from any one in the world to enable you to further your own interests will understand that these laws are outlined for your special benefit, and if you have already observed them you will be glad to know in your heart that the reproof they convey to the delinquent, the thoughtless or the indifferent does not apply to you. The reproof is intended for the thoughtless, the delinquent and the indifferent.

After Receiving the Favor Sought, Too Many Lapse Into Silence

A struggling youth, intelligent, moral, industrious, found himself in temporary embarrassment, and wrote to a friend asking for a loan. The loan was granted promptly, and with words implying the pleasure it was to be able to bestow this favor. A grateful acknowledgment of the accompanying check was received in reply. Then an utter silence ensued.

Months became a year and no word was heard from the young man who had been benefited, save an occasional item of information through casual mutual acquaintances.

The etiquette of the Debtors' Union should demand that at least twice a year a courteous and friendly note should be written from the debtor to the lender, telling of his doings, his interests, his efforts toward success and his belief in final attainment of the goal he was seeking. No continual reference need be made to the debt but the individual who is sufficiently interested in another to lend him aid of any kind is sufficiently interested to feel the wound of silence and neglect.

Another young lad had passed through great sorrows and unusual tragedies, which resulted in the breaking up of his home and in his becoming adrift in the world without kith or kin. He wrote to a lady who had known him from childhood, asking for a small loan, with which he could provide himself decent raiment to wear in the fulfilment of duties he had recently secured. He assured the lady he would repay her one dollar a week until the small debt was liquidated.

The check was sent gladly, and in the accompanying letter the lady said she accepted his terms of payment, as she felt it would enable him to feel more manly and to form businesslike methods. Her bank returned the voucher of her check, which had been cashed, but in that way only was she even aware that it was ever received. No acknowledgment was sent to her, and even a letter of inquiry, after more than six months, brought no reply.

A young woman appealed to a personal friend for money with which to launch herself forth on a certain line of endeavor. It was a considerable sum, but it was supplied. Two or three brief notes of appreciation and gratitude followed in quick succession; then utter silence while months builded themselves into a year. Not even the social notes and kindly inquiries after health and happiness which had marked their acquaintance previous to the loan.

Still another young woman, with beauty, talents and ambition, asked a friend to help her out of financial difficulties. She was promptly helped, and assured that she need not hurry about the payment. One grateful letter ensued; then silence. Through a newspaper item the lady learned the interesting experiences which had come into the young woman's life.

It would seem that a sense of common decency, womanliness and courtesy would have caused this young woman to write her benefactor immediately of the avenues opening up before her and of the interesting experiences through which she was passing.

Borrowers Should Not Be Too Sensitive to Refer to Debts

These are but a few illustrations of what seems to be an almost universal habit of the borrowers of the world. To lend money to one's friend seems almost invariably to cause a deterioration of character and a loss of high ideals and nobility of thought in the borrower. It may be urged by the borrowers that they feel and do not like to write until they are able to liquidate it. But if they are not too sensitive to ask such favors they should not be too sensitive to refer to them after they have been granted.

There are shining exceptions, of course, to these dark examples. A woman struggling in direst poverty with a sick husband and a large family of small children (a woman of refinement and education) borrowed $100 in an hour of great despair. That was ten years ago. Two or three times a year the benefactor receives a few words, at least, and often a long letter from the one benefited, and even small sums have been insistently enforced upon the lender to lessen the debt in order that the borrower might retain her self-respect.

In that way half the sum has been paid, but better than that admiration and affection for the borrower have been strong factors in enriching the life of the lender. Here was one who understood without being taught the etiquette of debt. But they are few.

Next—The Winning of the West

Having placated Colorado, California et al. by his vote in New Jersey, Mr. Wilson now goes after the New England electors by pronouncing in favor of apple pie. But he still must ride bucking bronchos and denounce Ernest Seton Thompson before the whole country can be squared.

The Storm on Bathtub Bay

WHAT, ho! a sail off Faucet Point! What dauntless skipper, pray,
Has dared to brave the howling gale that lashes Bathtub Bay?
She's almost in the breakers now; but, look she's come about
And, half awash, with wind abeam, she's slowly standing out!
The wind is singing through her shrouds; her mizzentop is gone,
But, ploughing through the giant seas, she bravely staggers on!

AND on the shore her builder stands, and with untroubled eyes
He sees his vessel journey where the combers sink and rise.
And though the gallant little craft is smothered deep in foam,
He knows the storm, howe'er it rage, will blow her safely home.
Ay! let her reel and founder in the billow's Titan grip,
Her sails are stout, her timbers strong—the builder knows his ship!

BRAVE-HEARTED little builder! May each vessel that you launch,
Whatever storms they weather through, prove just as true and stanch!
May never terror chill your heart, nor trouble cloud your eyes
As you approach the coming days of greater enterprise!
And when your flagship shall set sail, God grant that she will find
As snug and safe a harbor as the one she left behind!
